House Kills Sales Tax; Realty Levy Rise Urged

Deficit Confronts Capital Officials As Nichols Plan Loses, 196 to 106

By James D. Secrest.
Post Staff Writer

An increase in the local real estate tax was threatened yesterday when the District revenue problem was further muddled by the refusal of the House to consider a combined sales and income tax bill reported by the House District Committee.

Facing a deficit of between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, District officials kept silent while Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee suggested increasing the present $1.75 realty tax and Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, indicated that no further revenue legislation will be presented to the House this session.

For the last three years the local realty tax has been fixed at $1.75 by specific act of Congress, but on July 1, this year, the levy must be set by order of the Commissioners under the act of 1922, which requires them to balance appropriations with revenue.

10 to 20 Cents Rise Likely

Unless revenue legislation is enacted meanwhile or 1941 appropriations are slashed to the level of anticipated tax returns, the Commissioners will have no choice but to raise the levy on realty and personal property.

This increase may range from 10 to 20 cents, depending upon the size of the deficit. Now estimated at $1,800,000, the deficit may be cut in half by promised reductions in the 1941 District supply bill. A 10-cent boost in the realty tax would raise $1,200,000.

On the other hand, any loss in the expected return from the personal income tax because of the confusion over domicile will add to the accumulated deficit.

The House, by a vote of 196 to 106, refused to permit Nichols to call up the sales-income tax bill after staging a brief filibuster in which the majority of Republicans joined a group of Democrats to return the measure to the District Committee.

"Argument for Suffrage"

"This is the strongest argument I've seen yet for local suffrage and self-government," commented Nichols after he had lectured the House for the action.

"The District won't suffer by this demonstration nearly so much as the members of the House," he added. "These members who wanted to save their constituents here from triple taxation will find that many of them will transfer their domicile to Washington because the income tax is much lower here than in most of the States."

The House's rejection of the District revenue measure without so much as a debate of its merits was similar to its action in 1937 when the District committee was rebuffed as it sought to call up a bill carrying an income tax that would have applied to the salaries of members of Congress.

Nichols Bill Killed

While the immediate future of the District's revenue system was thrown into confusion by the House vote, even proponents of the sales tax admitted that the Nichols bill had been killed for this session.

An effort to amend the present income tax law so as to escape the effect of the recent ruling of the U. S. Court of Appeals that the District cannot tax the income of residents who have domiciles in the States is expected when Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, returns to Washington.

The House roll call vote on the Nichols motion that the bill be called up showed 119 Republicans teaming with 75 Democrats, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite to pile up the 196 negative votes. The affirmative votes were 95 Democratic and 11 Republican.

Minority Leader Joe Martin joined in the assault on the bill on the ground that the District Committee should have deferred action until the next District day, April 8, because of the absence of Dirksen and Representative George J. Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, members of the committee.

Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, made a futile plea on the House floor and in the corridor for an affirmative vote to permit consideration of the revenue measure "on its merits."

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, fought Ran-

Youth Has Its Day

30,495 Children and Elders Brave Cold for Egg-Rolling

EASTER BUNNIES"—Joan and Jane Seitz, 11, twins, of Brookmont, Md., at the egg rolling (other pictures, page 17)

The Weather Man laid a bad Easter egg yesterday.

The low temperatures—21 at 9 a. m.—refrigerated the egg rolling fun hereabouts, but President and Mrs. Roosevelt knew that visitors had been in their backyard. Their gardeners were scraping up the whites and yolks at sundown.

The White House statisticians marked up 30,495 egg rollers and escorts, and Presidential Secretary Steven Early pondered, maybe, his status in the establishment.

"I'll see that you get in for 10 cents," a blonde child told him, as he approached the gates. The children were up to the old enterprise—taking in the elders for a fee.

One boy complained he had made but $2.25, as against $5 last year, and this told the story of comparative crowds and his business. In 1939, 52,250 rollers and escorts attended the egg-break.

The heroes of the piece were the United States Marine Band, who stoically got hot with "Oh, Johnny," while the mercury at 4:20 p. m. dropped to 32 from the afternoon's high of 33. Hardest luck of the day came to Barbara Jean Boettdier, of 316 South Fairfax drive, Alexandria, who was hit on the nose by a thrown Easter egg.

Elaborate Suicide Planned, Veteran Kills Self Day Ahead

A World War veteran died by his own hand in Walter Reed Hospital last night after elaborately planning a suicide which was to have taken place today. Taken to the hospital after firing three bullets into his body, he died within nine hours.

Police found William J. Scott, 47, of Jenkintown, Pa., wounded on the basement floor at the home of his sister, Mrs. Margaret A. Scott, of 819 Sheridan street northwest. On a nearby table they found about 25 notes in which Scott bequeathed personal possessions to relatives and begged forgiveness.

One contained a carefully drawn diagram depicting the swimming pool at Calvin Coolidge High School, a nearby tree and a bench, with the notation, "On Tuesday morning, March 26, you will find my dead body on this space."

Police said they could find no reason why Scott changed his plans and shot himself yesterday instead of today.

Schulte Runs, but Gets Chosen City's Grand Swami Anyhow

Five men and two women, making seven—a mystic number—attired in turbans with moons, stars and mystic symbols and with clairvoyant eyes, descended yesterday on the House District Committee, already decked in mystic fiscal figures of its own, and proclaimed Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, "Grand Swami of Mullane Center."

Schulte retreated in panic from the dubious title and shied at presentation of a crystal ball, designed to signalize his abandonment of an investigation of local fortune tellers.

Schulte took refuge behind Committee Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who inconveniently began reducing two months ago. The pursuers were Prince Piccolo Peter, Duke Ridem Cowboy, Swami Inna Trance, Prof. Free Wheeling, Princess Gotta Itch, Clairvoyant Mary, Ali Baba Sales Tax, Swami Knonix and Swami Mullings.

The delegation first sat decorously in front-row chairs, while the District's business went apace. They had entered the building with placards, as though to stage a show. They wore arm bands proposing Schulte for President and Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, for Vice President. Police took these. They got by with their manifesto.

This said they had felt "all was well with us" as soon as Schulte was appointed chairman of the subcommittee to conduct the investigation of their kind.

"We further wish to express our thanks to Mr. Jack Nichols, Congressman from Oklahoma, for his courageous and able defense of the rights of the citizens of Washington to consult us fortune tellers if they wish," it read.

Woman Dies in D. C. Cold; 13-Foot Snow in N. Y. State

Death of a District woman was blamed by police on the Easter cold wave which swept the Nation yesterday. In central New York State, the worst blizzard since 1888 caused five deaths and injuries to at least 100 persons.

Mrs. Essie Holmes, 58, of the 2400 block of H street northwest, was dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital yesterday after police found her unconscious in the 900 block of Snows court northwest. Police thought she died of exposure, but Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was due to natural causes.

As the blizzard swept across New York, State police estimated 500 automobiles were caught in drifts ranging up to 13 feet deep. Wyoming County, with 30,000 residents, was reported virtually isolated with all roads blocked.

Snow fell from 1 to 8 inches deep from Arkansas across Tennessee into the Carolinas and Georgia and Alabama.

Yesterday's highest temperature in Washington was 33 degrees at 3 p. m., with a low of 19 at 8 a. m. Fair and continued cold was forecast for today, with slowly rising temperatures tomorrow. A low of 18 before dawn was predicted for today

Court Limits Control by Patent Owner

Forbids Extension To Resale Prices; Decision Strengthens U. S. Trust Actions

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

In a decision hailed as giving the Government greatly increased power in its fight on monopoly, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday that holders of patents may not extend their control over their products beyond the sale to jobbers and may not fix resale prices.

Specifically, the court held that the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation has exercised an unlawful control over gasoline prices through a "patent monopoly."

Government prosecution officials, however, said the decision went "far beyond the oil industry" and would strengthen the Government's hand in action within other industries.

As a result of the far-reaching decision, patent owners are forbidden to employ "patent pools" to control their products after more than one sale. The decision sets up a distinction between a "basic" patent, giving the holder a legal monopoly on use of his product, and subsidiary patents which would be worthless without the original invention or discovery.

Price Control Found

The Ethyl Corporation, the court found, had used subsidiary patents to extend its control over the price of gasoline as far as the consumer. Effect of the corporation's licensing system, according to the opinion, exceeded mere protection of the Ethyl patents and gave the corporation "dominion over the jobbers' business" and a weapon for "suppressing competition among them."

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust prosecution, described the court's unanimous opinion as "the most important decision on the subject of the use of patents to restrain trade that has ever been handed down by any court."

A "Guide," Says Arnold

"The decision, in effect, goes far beyond the oil industry," Arnold said. "It will serve as a very helpful guide to the department in our general investigation of patents."

The Justice Department now is engaged in a campaign against alleged use of patents in restraint of trade. A case against the glass container industry is pending at Cleveland and another, involving the composition board industry, was filed two weeks ago in New York.

Justice Stone said the corporation for 11 years has investigated the "business ethics" of jobbers applying for licenses to sell ethyl-treated gasoline. "Business ethics," the corporation admitted, denoted compliance with "marketing policies and posted prices of the major oil companies or the market leaders among them."

Among these major companies, the court notes, is the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, which owns half

Trade Pact Fight Opens In Senate

Pittman, Harrison Clash as Debate Centers on Move For Ratification

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday heard the reciprocal trade agreements act defended as an "emergency measure" and denounced as unconstitutional, as one of the major legislative battles of the session entered its final phase.

Two Democratic veterans, Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee and Chairman Pittman of the Foreign Relations Committee, crossed swords in the opening debate over the Administration proposal for three-year extension of the present law.

While Senator Harrison said the trade program is "the greatest influence to promote rational international trade and the maintenance of peace," Senator Pittman charged that the agreements are in reality treaties and therefore ought to be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

Passage Is Likely

Under the present law and proposed, the President has the power to alter tariffs by 50 per cent without specific Congressional approval.

The odds appeared to favor Senate passage of the House-approved bill, but an intense fight is expected over a series of amendments designed to restrict executive power in negotiating the agreements.

Maximum opposition strength—coming from a virtually solid Republican bloc and many Western Democrats—is expected to rally behind Senator Pittman's proposal for Senate ratification of each agreement.

Administration forces hope to beat down the Pittman amendment by a margin of from three to seven votes; but as several Senators were still in doubt, no prediction could be made. It has been reported that President Roosevelt would veto the bill if it contained a restrictive amendment similar to Pittman's.

In the debate yesterday, Senator Harrison declared that the original trade agreements law was "an emergency measure" and that "we are still trying to meet an emergency." Perhaps in the hope of weaning away some of the Republican opposition, the Democratic veteran asserted that the reciprocity principle is of Republican, not Democratic, origin.

Davis Attacks Program

Senator Harrison, whose committee handled the bill, said continuation of the reciprocal trade program would be to "extend a helping hand toward the goal of economic peace and stability among nations."

"This program should be a beacon-light to these war-torn foreign nations," he said, "a light that might guide them when peace does come, along the paths of better international economic relationships."

Pennsylvania's two Senators, Guffey (Democrat) and Davis (Republican) split, as usual, over the

Mauretania Drops Anchor at Canal On Fifth Day Out

Crystal Lake, Ill., March 25 (AP).—(AP).—The 35,739-ton British liner Mauretania, five days out of New York, anchored tonight in Cristobal Bay, presumably in preparation for going through the Panama Canal tomorrow.

The Mauretania, which ordinarily can carry 1,500 passengers, sailed from New York only one day ahead of the Queen Mary, her big sister. Despite complete secrecy as to the destination of the ships, both were believed en route for troopship duty, probably from Australia to the Near East.

(Because of her size, the 81,235-ton Queen Mary cannot be taken through the canal and, if she is en route to Australia, probably would go around the Cape of Good Hope.)

Northwestern Flyer Derailed, Fireman Killed

Crystal Lake, Ill., March 25 ½.—The Chicago & North Western Railroad's passenger train, "The Viking," was derailed near here tonight, killing the fireman and seriously injuring the engineer. At least one passenger was injured.

All the coaches of the train, en route from Minneapolis to Chicago, left the tracks, but only the locomotive overturned. An official said the train "entered a misplaced switch."

Hatch Expects House Approval Of Act Changes

Senator Hatch and Representative Dempsey, New Mexico Democrats, and leading proponents of the Hatch "clean politics" bill, yesterday declared they were "very hopeful" of speedy House action on the measure.

The bill, which passed the Senate last week, extends to Federally paid State employes the present prohibition on political activity of Federal workers.

It was said yesterday that the House Judiciary subcommittee, now considering the bill, will probably report it favorably tomorrow.

Archbishop Curley Installed As Head of Capital Diocese

A golden crozier, or crooked staff, was handed to the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley as he sat on a canopied throne in the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle yesterday. It was the symbol of his pastoral authority in a new role.

The City of Washington, with its 92,000 Catholics, had been raised to the rank and dignity of an archdiocese, St. Matthew's had become a cathedral church, and Archbishop Curley had been installed as the first Archbishop of Washington—a title that is now added to his old one of Archbishop of Baltimore.

Thus, in an ancient ceremony rich in pageantry and solemnity, effect was given to the apostolic bulls issued July 22, 1939, by Pope Pius XII, whose visit to Washington in 1936 as Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican Secretary of State, is believed to have led to the creation of the National Capital from the Arch-

2 Republicans In House Ask SEC Inquiry

Thorkelson, Crawford Offer Resolutions For Investigation

By Felix Cotten.

Two proposals for a House investigation to determine whether the Securities and Exchange Commission and the acts administered by it are retarding business recovery were offered in the House yesterday.

Resolutions were submitted by Representatives Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, and Thorkelson (Republican), of Montana. The latter proposed an investigation also of the National Power Policy Committee.

Republicans and conservative Democrats in both House and Senate have accused the SEC of "stifling" the flow of capital into industry, it was the first time, however, that a move had been made to bring about an inquiry.

Committee of Seven Urged

Crawford's resolution would create a committee of seven House members, empowered to name its own chairman. The Speaker would appoint the members, but could not name more than four Democrats.

The resolution would instruct the committee to determine how the acts administered by the SEC and the manner of their administration affect the national economy, and, whether Congress should further clarify and define the commission's functions. The committee would recommend any legislation or changes in administrative policy deemed desirable.

Thorkelson proposed a committee of five members. The object of the inquiry would be to determine whether the SEC and the National

2 Men Killed As Car Crashes Into Trailer

7 Hurt in Traffic In D. C. and Nearby; Fire Truck Hits Auto

Two men were killed last night when a trailer-truck crushed their auto in a smashup on No. 1 highway, 9 miles south of Alexandria.

In other accidents within the Washington area, three persons were injured in a collision involving two automobiles and a fire truck; one was hurt in the wreck of a trailer-truck and two autos; a man was critically injured when felled by a truck; and two women were hurt in a three-car collision.

The dead, identified from papers in their billfolds, are Michael Richard, 49, of New York City, and William R. Moore, 47, of Tampa, Fla.

Driver Testifies at Inquest

William Wiley, 27, of Hatfield, Pa., driver of the trailer-truck, testifying at an inquest last night, said the truck was proceeding south on Route No. 1 in the right-hand lane when an auto in front, bearing Pennsylvania tags, swerved to the center lane as if to turn left and then abruptly switched back to the right lane.

To avoid hitting the Pennsylvania auto, Wiley said, he swerved his truck to the center lane, and when the brake of the left front wheel locked, the trailer swung sharply to the left, blocking the northbound side of the highway.

Held in $500 Bond

As the trailer swerved into its path, Wiley continued, a Florida car, in which Moore and Richard were riding, ran into the trailer, which toppled on the auto and killed its occupants. The trailer was loaded

Trio Arrested in Murder Ring Talking Fast to Save Lives

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—A trio of gang hoodlums with such picaresque soubriquets as "Max the Jerk" and Charlie the Bug" swelled the chorus of Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer's "singing school" of informers today in the investigation of 30-odd slayings linked with "Murder, Inc."

"I am working on more than 15 murders," O'Dwyer said after a day of questioning.

"I could give you front-page headlines a foot high, but I want to correlate my facts first," he added.

Behind locked doors, the three "singers"—Max (the Perk) Golob, 30; Albert Tannenbaum, 34, and Charles (the Bug) Workman, 30—talked fast in an effort to save their hides from the electric chair, divulging what O'Dwyer noncommittally described as "impressive" new details of the wholesale operations of the $5-and-$10 slaughter syndicate.

U. S. Alters Policy

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The War and Navy Departments yesterday agreed on a new aircraft export policy which will permit the Allies to obtain the latest American warplanes in a hurry.

Publication of the new policy, involving sharp changes from prior rules, will be withheld until tomorrow when Secretary of War Woodring is to explain it to the House Military Affairs Committee. Officials said, however, that it provided:

Some 600 new planes now under construction for the Army and Navy will be turned over to Great Britain and France.

The Allies will be allowed to place orders for the latest experimental Army and Navy craft, heretofore withheld.

No secret military devices will be released with the planes.

Allies Must Report

The Allies will be required to furnish full reports on the performance of American planes in action abroad to permit improvements to be made in later models for our armed services.

The War and Navy departments will decide which of the planes now building will be diverted to the Allies and in each case the manufacturer must have a better plane in view. This will permit the Army and Navy to obtain better aircraft by waiting.

Safeguard for the American plane industry and employment in this country is to be provided by requiring the buyers to guarantee that they will not manufacture or assemble planes of American design abroad.

$1,000,000,000 Expected

The policy revision is expected to pave the way for an expected $1,000,000,000 in aircraft orders. A Franco-British purchasing mission which has been here several months has placed few contracts because it could not get the latest planes.

Some six of the Army's latest bombers and pursuit planes on which deliveries will not start for several months have been withheld from foreign release until now. These will now be made available, it was said.

Administration circles have been split for some time on the question. One group, including a number of Army and Navy officers, favored giving the Allies our latest planes, holding that the expansion of aircraft production facilities far outweighed any loss suffered by selling the latest designs.

Production Tripled

Others fought the efforts to release these or divert any Army-Navy orders to the Allies. Then President Roosevelt stepped in last week. He defended foreign sales of planes as an important national defense move, declaring that as a result production had tripled in the past year, and termed suggestions

NO. 1 G-MAN: The moment's fusillade aimed at Edgar Hoover—which largely missed its mark—was the inevitable result and the aftermath of his survival of three different regimes at the Department of Justice within a little more than a year — under Cummings, Murphy and Jackson. Along with the smell of burnt powder has arisen the smell of intrigue.

Harlan Miller

Said a high official closely associated with Hoover privately yesterday:

"If Edgar Hoover were, by some unthinkable squeeze-play, forced to resign, inevitably the most alert Republican candidate would hasten to announce that he would, if elected, reappoint Hoover, not merely chief of the FBI, but his Attorney General. It would win him innumerable votes. Hoover is a first-rate lawyer."

* * * *

"Three regimes in 13 months leave a somewhat snarled situation in the personnel of any bureau or department. But Hoover emerges with his FBI still nonpolitical, defiant of lobbyists and staffed with high grade men behind every shield," he continued.

"It's silly to refer to the FBI as an American Ogpu," said the man who knew Hoover. "The FBI is neither Republican nor Democratic. We won't have an Ogpu until one political party dominates the FBI."

What's more, one of the first boats from the Columbus brought him a gift of a magnum of French champagne.

ARCHDUKE'S WAR: That engagingly earnest young Hapsburg, the Archduke Otto tells people that he is suffering from the war almost as much as anybody else. There is an air-raid siren across the street from his Paris house, and when it sounds off during the night it almost blows him out of bed.

But Otto just goes back to sleep, declines to descend to the air-raid shelters.

"The smarter people don't go down to the abris," says Otto. "Because people who do, run the risk of catching pneumonia."

Apparently the abri climate is like the artificial climate at the White House, where the President catches so many colds.

Quite surprisingly to more calloused connoisseurs of royalty, Archduke Otto has made a hit in the Capital.

Hundreds of stenographers have missed lunch for a glimpse of him, and to more restrained observers he seems to have more brains than most sprigs of royalty.

He says some very fetching things about democracy, too.

SEX ANGLE: Some of the milder critics of Col. Fleming, of Wages and Hours, have been trying to induce him to pep up his posters to various segments of industry about wages, which are posted in plant offices.

They argue that if his recent posters to the millinery, hosiery and knitted underwear trades had been illustrated with suitable drawings or photographs, much more enthusiastic acquiescence might have been attained, as well as much more favorable attention.

Slap at Dewey Seen in Speech By Vandenberg

'Seasoned' Leaders For G. O. P. Advocated In Radio Address

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, last night urged the Republican Party ot find "seasoned" leaders, and to go before the country with a "clear and explicit" platform.

His reference to "seasoned" leadership was interpreted as a slap at youthful Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, who is matched against Vandenberg in Wisconsin's Republican primary next Tuesday, and in the Nebraska primaries the following week.

Speaking on the "determining issues" of 1940 over a National Broadcasting network, Vandenberg declared the country "is ready for a change" and "no factor will be more conclusive than the Republican Party's ability to write a platform which is clear and explicit in its formula, and to find seasoned leadership which leaves no room to doubt the dependability of the program."

Declined Stump Bids

Vandenberg accepted an invitation for the network address after declining bids to stump both Wisconsin and Nebraska. Dewey will make this week a last-minute swing through Wisconsin in advance of the April 2 balloting.

Outcome of the 1940 campaign, Vandenberg said, "is peculiarly uncertain because of two unknown qualities"—the President's intentions respecting a third term and the war.

He said the third-term issue "might crowd out all others" if it arises and the war issue "could dominate all others if the people should conclude that our national policy heads us into foreign entanglements and into other peoples' wars."

'Set Our House in Order'

He urged that the country fix its mind "upon our own unanswered internal necessities," contending "we cannot wait much longer to set our own house in order."

"It is my view that the fundamental stake is free enterprise, free institutions and free men," Vandenberg said. "It involves economic recovery, American style. It involves the restoration of maximum individual liberty of action, maximum State and local self-government, and a renewal of the Constitutional limitations which have made us the world's greatest representative democracy."

Bidding for Wisconsin's dairy-farmer vote, the Michigan Senator assailed the Farm Act's provisions for parity only for "favored five" commodities. He said it was "ridiculous" to help producers of these five commodities and to omit livestock, milk and eggs.

Vandenberg advised that expenditures be cut "freely admitting that Government must continue to supply relief until the capitalistic system can supply real jobs."

3 Men Seized In Mystery Death Of South Carolinian

Three men were arrested last night after a man identified as James Creed, 36, of Greenville, S. C., an auto mechanic, was found dead under mysterious circumstances in the hallway of a house in the 2100 block of Ninth street northwest.

Police investigted the possibility of murder after residents at the Ninth street address said they had seen a colored man run from the house shortly before Creed was found. Sixty dollars known to have been on his person was missing.

Deputy Coroner Cristopher Murphy reported an autopsy showed the man died of natural causes.

Hull Would Take Nomination, Friends Feel

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Friends of Secretary of State Hull said yesterday they are encouraging "good will" efforts in his behalf in the firm belief that Hull would accept the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Hull continues to discourage organized political activity in support of his nomination. Members of Congress regarded as close to the Secretary said this did not mean he will reject a convention call.

Work done in his behalf was described as on the personal initiative of his friends. They said Hull has shown no displeasure at friendly words spoken for him, but has frowned on an organized campaign.

Roosevelt to Speak

Hull backers scouted reports that he would decline the nomination if offered, as President Roosevelt accepted an invitation to address by radio a series of Jeffersonian banquets on April 20, sponsored by the Young Democratic clubs of America. His decision to speak to the Young Democrats opened another opportunity to express his views on a third term.

The address would come after Wisconsin, Nebraska and Illinois voters have balloted their verdict on "draft Roosevelt" primary slates, affording the President the first extensive sampling of popular opinion.

Some observers at the Capitol held the view the President would wait until all primaries are over and virtually up to the eve of the Democratic convention before making his intentions known.

The invitation to address the Jeffersonian dinners was presented at the White House by Matt Adams, president of the Young Democrats.

Garner Goes Into Oregon

Meanwhile, Vice President Garner carried his battle against a third term into a fifth State—Oregon. Garner signed an affidavit of candidacy Saturday and filed yesterday with Earl Snell, Oregon secretary of State, to place his name on Oregon's May 17 primary ballot.

The Vice President had previously entered against third-term slates in four States—Wisconsin, Nebraska, Illinois and California.

Garner moved into Oregon as his own State was invaded by a third-term boomlet, reputedly led by former Govs. James E. Ferguson and Dan Moody, and as Secretary of Interior Ickes, leading third-term booster, left to speak in Kilgore, Tex., tomorrow on the tenth anniversary of the last Texas oil field.

Garner managers evinced little concern over Texas loyalty to the Vice President. The Lone Star State will select its 46 delegates to the Democratic Convention at a State convention May 28. Garner organizers were expected to resist any third-term inroads.

Ickes Confers With Roosevelt

Ickes conferred with the President before leaving for Texas. Although his Kilgore speech was listed as incidental to the oil field anniversary celebration, observers recalled the official secrecy attending Ickes' recent trip to California to negotiate a "harmony" third-term slate.

A split over dual Roosevelt tickets in Wisconsin primaries cheered Garner backers.

Although Secretary Hull was aloof from precampaign hurly burly, standing on his January statement that he had no Presidential ambitions, Tennesseeans at the Capitol expressed conviction that he would "accept a call to duty."

The Secretary was said to deem it improper to indulge in political self-seeking activities while in the Cabinet.

Dies Witness FacesContempt Proceedings

Communist Refuses To Divulge Signer Of Roosevelt Name

By the United Press

The Dies committee decided yesterday to press contempt charges against a witness who refused to divulge to the committee or secret service agents the identity of a Communist Party member signing himself falsely as "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The contempt citation was voted against James H. Dolsen, of Pittsburgh, avowed Communist, in whose possession the membership booklet was found. He admitted knowing the true identity of the member, but said he could not make the name public.

Dolsen's persistent refusal to yield information on this point, as well as on other questions regarding the names of certain Communist officials, led to the committee's action.

The Secret Service entered the case at the request of White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, who said the membership card "cannot be anything less than a forgery."

Two agents questioned Dolsen this afternoon, and he said afterward that he had explained "fully" his reasons for not disclosing the identity of the person who used the President's name.

The contempt citation was the first voted by a Congressional committee since Dr. Francis E. Townsend, author of the Townsend old age pension plan, stalked angrily out of a hearing several years ago.

In refusing to answer questions put to him by committee members, headed by Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, Dolsen insisted that his "Constitutional rights" permitted him to remain silent.

He was particularly reluctant to discus details concerning a $2,000 life insurance policy he has with International Workers Order, Inc., and in which, a committee investigator charged, he had named the Communist Party as beneficiary.

Gas in Water Blasts Bathrooms Of Baton Rouge

Baton Rouge, La., March 25 (AP).—A series of freakish explosions hit the vicinity of Louisiana State University's campus today when gas got into city water mains. There were no injuries.

One resident flushed a toilet and it blew up, ripping doors loose and wrecking furniture.

A duplex residence exploded with such force it blew a bathtub 50 feet and nearly pushed a neighboring house off its foundation.

Pair Found Dead Of Gas Poisoning

Lynchburg, Va., March 25 (AP).—The partly clad bodies of an elderly man and a young girl, dead from asphyxiation by gas, were discovered this afternoon in a cabin at the Old Fort tourist hotel east of Lynchburg on Route 460.

The couple were identified by Sheriff Jack Miles, of Campbell County, as William Radford Viar, 57, of Lynchburg, a building contractor, and Alice Florence Amos, 22, of Madison, an operator in an overall factory.

Dr. H. P. Brown, Campbell County coroner, said death was caused by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Executive Cites Growth of Schools, Balanced Budget, Stable Taxes, At First Governor's Night Banquet Here

Gov. Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina last night described the economic and cultural growth of his State in recent years to nearly 400 guests at the first Governors' Night banquet of the North Carolina State Society at the Willard Hotel.

He was introduced by his brother-in-law, former Gov. O. Max Gardner, of the same State. Both are natives of Shelby, N. C., and practiced law there when young men. Gardner is now an attorney in Washington.

Gov. Hoey emphasized that there are now more than 900 four-year high schools in the State, while 32 years ago there were only 14.

North Carolina is attempting diversification of agriculture and is attracting many new industries, he stated.

North Carolina "has a balanced budget," he said, adding that there has been no tax increase in four years but that there has been an increase in business. "In fact past three years the people of North Carolina have made more money than they did in 1929," he declared.

Among the guests were Senator Reynolds, and Representatives Warren, Kerr, Bulwinkle, Doughton and Weaver. Fred Morrison, president of the society, was toastmaster. A dance followed the dinner.

with hosiery machinery. Eugene Nelson, of Accotink, Va., who was driving behind the Florida auto, confirmed Wiley's testimony.

Wiley was ordered held for a preliminary hearing at Fairfax court Thursday and released on $500 bond. Both he and his relief driver, Ralph Illingworth, 38, of Lansdale, Pa., escaped unscathed. It took a half hour to extricate the bodies from the crushed sedan. The bodies were taken to Wheatley's funeral parlor, 809 King street, Alexandria.

An Arlington woman and her six-year-old daughter were injured yesterday afternoon when a fire truck rammed their parked car on the Wilson Boulevard, at Clarendon, Va.

The crash victims, Mrs. Emma C. Overstreet, 30, of North Washington boulevard, Arlington, and her daughter, Barbara Ann, were taken to Georgetown Hospital. The woman was said to be in serious condition after having suffered a fractured right leg and other injuries. The girl's injuries were minor. Mrs. Overstreet's husband, Emmet, 30, was unhurt.

According to police, the hook-and-ladder truck of the Clarendon Fire Department was racing to a blaze at Bon Air, when it swerved to avoid an auto, hit the rear of a machine driven by Howard L. Anderson, of 2156 North Thomas street, Arlington, and lunged into the Overstreet car, which was waiting for the fire engine to pass.

The impact hurled James Campbell, 21, of 2126 North Nineteenth street, Arlington, from the truck into the street. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by another fire truck. The driver of the fire vehicle, Frank Sussan, 28, of 1515 Wilson boulevard, and three other firemen were shaken up. The Ballston Fire Department responded to the Bon Air fire.

W. D. Flagg, of Bowling Green, Va., was the lone person injured yesterday when his trailer-truck lodged against the pillar of an underpass on Route No. 1 near Woodbridge, Va., after striking an auto driven by Josephine Pack, of New Brunswick, N. J. A second auto attempting to avoid the pileup, ran into a curb, causing a blowout and leaving the auto disabled.

Felled by a truck as he worked with the road gang resurfacing the Florida avenue underpass between Second and Third streets northeast, Roy Butler, 40, of 444 I street northwest, was critically hurt. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital suffering from a punctured right lung and other injuries. Operator of the truck, police said, was Francis B. Marlowe, 34, colored, of 1444 C street southeast.

3 Autos in Collision

Mrs. J. E. Tucker, of Stanley, Va., suffered a broken nose, and Mrs. Edna Koontz, of 1402 Fourteenth street northwest, injuries to the forehead, in an accident involving three autos at the entrance to the Manor Club, near Norbeck, Md. They were treated at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, Md.

Montgomery County police reported that a car, operated by Miss Mable C. Grove, 56, of Stanley, Va., proceeding south on Seventh Street pike, swerved to avoid striking an auto operated by Ithamar M. Beard, 65, of Bethel, Conn., leaving the club grounds, and collided with a third machine, operated by Merle F. Mayne, 22, of Rockville. Miss Grove and Beard were charged with reckless driving at the Rockville police station.

Head of NYA Storm Center In Fund Debate

Williams, Stokowski Scored as House Unit Approves Resolution

By the Associated Press

A resolution authorizing an $85,000,000 appropriation for the National Youth Administration was approved by the House Rules Committee yesterday after an angry debate over whether Aubrey Williams, NYA head, and Leopold Stokowski, the orchestra leader, lean toward communism.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, suggested an amendment to forbid payment of any of the funds to Williams because a House committee had received testimony that William "consorted with Communists."

Representative Tarver (Democrat), Georgia, replied he was satisfied the NYA chief was not a Communist. He described Williams as "an idealist and dreamer" who perhaps "needs to be guided and restrained."

Calls Williams "Dangerous"

Representative Fish (Republican), N. Y., said he considered Williams "the most dangerous man in the Government."

Stokowski's name was brought in by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, who asserted that Williams was aiding in supplying musicians for a good-will tour of South America which the Philadelphia orchestra leader is arranging.

Declaring that Stokowski belonged to several allegedly communistic organizations, Taber said Williams was "planning to take 109 American youths and turn them over to a man whose record is communistic."

Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, challenged Taber's statement, contending none of the organizations to which Taber referred were communistic.

Claims $2,600 spent

Tarver said Williams had asserted that the NYA had spent $2,600 conducting auditions for musicians to qualify for the South American tour, but that otherwise no NYA funds were involved in the venture.

"I think he made a mistake," the Georgian added, "and we have written into the bill a provision that will prevent the NYA in the future from serving as an employment agency."

Tarver said the committee had also put in "safeguards" which would prevent the use of NYA funds for employment of Communists.

Neighbors Seek Stinnette Return To Wife, Daughter

Fairfax County neighbors of William Stinnette, 29, who broke jail at Lynchburg, Va., nine years ago and lived under the name of Jack Horton, have petitioned court authorities to permit him to return to his wife and 6-year-old daughter.

Stinnette was arrested a month ago in Fairfax County, where he was working as a farmhand for M. S. Crippen, near Vienna. Crippen said last night he was "honest and a hard worker."

Stinnette married a Fairfax County woman after breaking jail. He will stand trial next month in Lynchburg corporation court on a charge of larceny of an automobile pending against him when he escaped in 1931.

Duncan Warns Campers Of Fire Carelessness

A warning against carelessness of campers, picnickers and persons burning leaves and trash was issued by Alexandria Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., yesterday, after two companies of Alexandria firemen battled more than an hour to check a woods fire near the Beverly Hills subdivision. A high wind fanned the flames over a four-acre area.

Alexandria firemen were called on to answer 11 alarms yesterday, most of them grass and woods fires.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Pan-American Union presents Carmen de Obarrio, pianist, and Alfredo de St. Malo, violinist (Edward Harris, assisting pianist) in a joint recital Monday afternoon under sponsorship of Dr. Jorge N. Boyd, Ambassador of Panama.

Invited auditors filled the Hall of the Americas at the Pan-American Union late yesterday afternoon for the inauguration of a recital series replacing the indoor concerts which have been given there during recent years. Dr. Jorge N. Boyd, Ambassador of Panama, was the official host who introduced two artists from that republic: Carmen de Obarrio, pianist, and Alfredo de St. Malo, violinist. The innovation proved to be decidedly enjoyable, as the listeners had full opportunity for appraising the merits of the artists without the distraction of a service band, which has hitherto been assigned the larger part of programs.

Ray C. Brown

Carmen de Obarrio devoted a capable technique to the exposition of European compositions: Egon Petri's version of Bach's C minor concerto, a toccata by the Eighteenth Century harpsichordist, Pietro Doeinco Paradisi; Brahms' F sharp minor caprice, and six preludes by Debussy. She has fluency and a good control of dynamics, while her manner of playing is engaging. In the first group her style was rather academic, even in the romantic caprice of Brahms, but in the Debussy preludes she disclosed musical sensitiveness and expertise in tonal shadings. One was disappointed, however, by her avoidance of Latin-American composers with whom we in this country are far too unacquainted.

Alfred de St. Malo differed from his compatriot by supplying a generous amount of music originating in neighboring countries to the south. His single European offering was a sonata in G minor by Henry Eccles, an English violinist contemporary with Bach, who wrote in the style of Corelli. His other selections came from Colombia, Peru, Brazil and Cuba.

The most important work was the B flat major sonata by Guillermo Uribi-Holguin, director of the National Conservatory in Bogota. This sonata, both scholarly and poetic in its implications, shows some signs of influence by Vincent d'Indy in the harmonic style. It is absolute music, in the sense that it has no traces of Colombian local color, and it has an imaginative quality in thematic treatment. Though a little discursive at times, the music has vitality and an interesting content of ideas.

The violinist also provided a Colombian danza by Holguin, an Inca dance, "Koachampa," by Joseph White, the Cuban violinist who traveled widely and well; and a fanciful descriptive piece about a Brazilian Lorelei, "Mae d'Agua Chante," by Luis Cosme.

Concilman Wins SEC Permit To Buy Utility Concern for $1

Harold E. Greenwood, of Gardner, Mass., supervisor of a State forestry camp, yesterday obtained the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission to buy for $1 the Gardner Gas, Fuel & Light Co., a utility concern with a plant investment of more than $361,000.

Greenwood, a member of the Gardner city council, was awarded the approval because of a contract he had signed with Massachusetts Utilities Associates. An employe of the City of Gardner had bid $2 for the property but his bid was ruled out because of the Greenwood contract.

Massachusetts Utilities, a subsidiary of New England Power Association, controlled Gardner Gas, Fuel & Light through its ownership of 1,368 shares of the company's 1,400 outstanding shares of capital stock. Massachusetts Utilities originally paid $29,906 for the Gardner shares.

Massachusetts Utilities Associates sought to sell the Gardner company because it operated at a loss.

Because of the hardship it would have entailed on the 630 consumers which the company served, it entered into a contract with Greenwood to sell the property for a nominal sum of $1. All these factors were taken into consideration by the SEC in approving the transfer of the company to Greenwood.

Greenwood will continue operation of the property, and has asserted that he "can make a livelihood from the operation of the company," the SEC opinion states.

"In light thereof and the absence of any basis to conclude that his stated intention to continue the operations of the company is at variance with true purposes," the SEC observed, "it appears that by allowing the consummation of the proposed sale, the event of liquidation and abandonment of the company could at least be extended, and the interest of consumers preserved for the immediate future, although, how long Greenwood will be able to continue operations of the company is conjectural."

Archbishop Curley, Enthroned in Capital, Pleads for Tolerance

Papal Delegate Conducts Rites Of Installation

Prelates, Priests March Through Cold To St. Matthew's

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, who installed Archbishop Curley in his new see, reflected the Pope's admiration for this country when he said:

"This event in a special manner interests the Catholics of the District of Columbia, who are jubilant in finally having their own diocese.

"But it is also an event of wider significance, and such as to gladden the hearts of the more than 21,000,000 Catholics of this Nation. Their beloved Federal Capital has been highly honored and its glorious name will henceforth appear in the series of archdioceses of the Catholic church."

Archbishop Cicognani, a student of American history, took occasion to recall the 300-year Catholic background of this region.

He went back to the Catholic Lord Baltimore, who founded Maryland as a sanctuary of religious freedom. He told how Thomas Notley, an English Catholic, owned what is now Capitol Hill; how Daniel Carroll and Notley Young, two of his heirs, sold the land to George Washington; how Maj. Pierre Charles l'Enfant, French Catholic engineer, laid out the city for Washington, and how James Hoban, an Irish Catholic architect, designed the White House.

Patriotism Called Duty

Archbishop Cicognani reminded the 1,000 clergy and laity gathered in beautiful St. Matthew's that last March 12 was the 150th anniversary of an historic letter—that in which George Washington praised the Catholics of the country for their contribution to the War of Independence.

He—and Archbishop Curley, when it came time to respond—emphasized the Catholic's duty to love his country.

Archbishop Curley struck hard at intolerance; intolerance, that is, on the part of Catholics. He said:

"For those who are not of the faith, regardless of their religion, or lack of it, we members of the church established by Jesus Christ may never have any other feeling than that of love for all our fellow men.

Pius XI Quoted

"In the words of Pius XI (of happy memory) 'No Catholic can be a true Catholic and at the same time harbor in his heart feelings of ill will or hatred against any man.'

"We of the old faith have grown accustomed through the years to the anti-feeling with which many regard us.

"But that never justifies our having any anti-feeling against Jew or Protestant or unbeliever. I want to see no such feeling aroused here in this new Archdiocese of Washington, or for that matter in any part of the world.'

Prelates March in Cold

"The men who hate and the men who arouse bitter feelings against their fellow men have nothing in common with our Blessed Saviour who laid down His fundamental law, the love of God and the love our neighbor."

The ceremony of installation began with a procession of priests and prelates. In biting cold and a sharp wind, they marched along Rhode Island avenue from St. Matthew's School to St. Matthew's Church, soon to be exalted to a cathedral.

First came the priests in their black cassocks and white surplices, walking in twos, the wind whipping up their hair. Presently, there was a flash of color, and the prelates hove into view—the monsignori and the bishops, all in purple, but distinguished by their berettas.

Msgr. Thomas Is Eldest

Among the monsignori were the Right Rev. Cornelius F. Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, still spry at 82. He was the oldest. The youngest was his 42-year-old assistant at St. Patrick's, Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of the Bureau of Catholic Charities.

Trailing the bishops was a cross bearer, and then came Archbishop Curley, vested in a gold and white cope and with a miter of the same hues. With him were his chaplains, the Right Rev. Msgr. Harry A. Quinn, rector of the Baltimore Cathedral, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Eugene J. Connelly, pastor of St. Peter's Church, this city.

A short distance behind came Archbishop Cicognani, vested in the cappa magna, a purple cassock with a long train and an ermine across the shoulders. The train was held by two students of St. Matthew's School — Fabian and Florent Hughes.

The chaplains for Archbishop Cicognani were the Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. J. Riordan, pastor of St. Martin's Church, and the Rt. Rev. Thomas G. Smythe, pastor of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament.

As a crowd of several hundred shivering persons along the curb looked on, the procession moved up the steps. Waiting to meet the archbishop-elect and the apostolic delegate was the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of the cathedral.

Lilies Adorn Altar

Inside the vestibule of the cathedral, Archbishop Cicognani knelt at a priedieu, kissed a crucifix and, with an aspergio, sprinkled bystanders with holy water.

The procession then headed toward the altar, aglow with candles and decorated with Easter lilies. The choir sang "Ecce Sacerdos" (behold the priest).

Reaching the sanctuary, Archbishop Curley and Archbishop Cicognani walked over to the Sacred Heart Chapel, where they knelt in prayer. Then they walked back to the sanctuary. Archbishop Cicognani sat on the purple throne on the gospel side of the sanctuary. Archbishop Curley went to a faldstool alongside the high altar of the cathedral.

At this point, Msgr. Buckey handed to Archbishop Cicognani the papal bulls establishing the new Washington Archdiocese, appointing Archbishop Curley as its head, and raising St. Matthew's to a cathedral.

Archbishop Cicognani in turn handed the bulls to the Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, notary of the ceremony. From the lofty pulpit of cathedral, Father Cartwright read the bulls in English, and then taking up the executory decree of the apostolic delegate, read in a resonant Latin.

"Now within the boundaries of the Archdiocese of Baltimore," said the Vatican document, "there stands the City of Washington, the seat of the Government of the United States. This city is also especially distinguished for many Catholic institutions—among which are numbered two universities and colleges for the training of youth and at the same time its population is increasing so rapidly in recent years and it is growing so fast in power and wealth that the Apostolic See has justly decided that it should be adorned with the splendor of an archepiscopal throne.

"This is done the more gladly because this year (the bull was issued in 1939) is the 150th anniversary of the establishment of Washington as the Capital of the United States and of the foundation of the Episcopal See of Baltimore."

Once Father Cartwright had descended from the pulpit, Msgr. Buckey sang "Protector Nostra" (Our Protector). The choir took up the Antiphon and Versicle of St. Matthew—patron saint of the new cathedral. Then Archbishop Curley rose, ascended the altar, and sang the Prayer of St. Matthew. He turned then and with upraised hand gave his blessing.

The climax was now near. The Apostolic Delegate and Msgr. Buckey the high prelate, met Archbishop Curley at the foot of the altar, took his hands and led him to the throne.

Installation Complete

The choir sang the centuries-old "Te Deum Laudamus" (We Praise Thee, O God).

As the cathedral reverberated to the organ strains and the rhythmical prose of the hymn, Archbishop Cicognani handed the crozier to Archbishop Curley. The installation, or enthronement, was complete.

For 20 minutes then, the bishops, the monsignori and priests paraded to the throne, and, kneeling to kiss the archbishop's ring, pledged their obedience.

There followed the address of Archbishop Cicognani and the response by Archbishop Curley, who doffed his miter and changed into the ermined cappa magna before ascending the pulpit.

Archbishop Cicognani recalled a little-known bit of history concerning early Washington. He said that Daniel Carroll, of Duddington, owner of much of what is now the National Capital, gave a plot of ground called "Cathedral Square" with the thought that his relative, Archbishop John Carroll, would later transfer his episcopal see to the seat of the Government. On that tract now stands the Church of Saint Vincent de Paul.

"But in the plans of Divine Providence," said Archbishop Cicognani, "Baltimore was to be and to remain the Jerusalem of the Church in America, and from it was to begin the marvelous development of 116 dioceses now existing in the United States."

Praises Washington

He was generous in his praise of Washington, saying:

"A city that counts at least 92,000 Catholics, assisted by a numerous and distinguished clergy, with 34 parishes and other churches, with 28 parish schools; a city that boasts two Catholic universities, that of Georgetown, whose beginnings coincide with the very foundation of the venerable see of Baltimore, and where many statesmen and scholars, distinguished in the service of their country, have been trained; and the Catholic University of America, which alone forms a city of its numerous professors and students with some 30 seminaries, colleges and houses of study surrounding it; a city that boasts eminent and artistic churches such as Holy Trinity and St. Patrick's, the oldest, and this Cathedral of St. Matthew, whose centenary falls during the present year, the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the Franciscan Monastery and others; a city where for a long time have flourished many colleges, academies and high schools, sodalities, pious and charitable associations, such as the providential 'Christ Child,' a distinctly Washington foundation—such a city was indeed well prepared and worthy of being raised to an archdiocese."

Archbishop Curley who, from the day he was consecrated as Archbishop of Baltimore in 1921, has always placed emphasis on Catholic education. He did so again yesterday.

"If we are to make them (the children) worthy of their citizenship in the Church of God and in this Republic," he said, "then we must see to it that close to the church stands a Catholic school.

"Where there is doubt as to which we shall erect—a stately church or a capacious school—let us have no hesitation in making our choice—the school."

As Archbishop of Baltimore and Archbishop of Washington, the successor to the late Cardinal Gibbons holds a dual role unique in this country. It is one, according to some ecclesiastical authorities, which finds a parallel abroad only in the case of the Archbishop of Bari and Canosa.

Yesterday's ceremony was brought to a close with a solemn pontifical mass, celebrated by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, and Washington and pastor of St. Gabriel's Church here.

The Rev. Joseph M. Moran, pastor of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, served as deacon; the Rev. J. Jennings Clark, spiritual director of the Sodality Union of Washington as subdeacon, and the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary, as master of ceremonies.

Among other prominent churchmen at the enthronement were the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, titular bishop-delegate of Bilta, the rector of Catholic University; the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, bishop of Aeropolis; the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, co-adjutor bishop of Richmond; the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of Savannah-Atlanta; the Most Rev. Emmet M. Walsh, bishop of Charleston; the Most Rev. Edmond J. Fitzmaurice, bishop of Wilmington; the Right Rev. Vincent Taylor, abbot of Belmont Abbey, N. C., and the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown.

New D. C. Prelate Is Host At Party in Home for Aged

Archbishop Is Host to 225 Old Folk Under Care of Little Sisters of the Poor; Star Performer Is Former Slave, 81

Somebody had suggested to Archbishop Michael J. Curley that he be guest of honor at a hotel banquet, following his enthronement as head of the new Archdiocese of Washington.

Archbishop Curley had another idea. He decided to be host, not a guest, at a dinner, and he chose as the place—the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, 220 H street northeast. His guests were 225 old folk, white and colored, men and women who had to be penniless to become the "children" of the Little Sisters.

Archbishop Curley saw that they got chicken, ham, mashed potatoes, peas, cranberry sauce, celery and nuts, a small glass of white wine, and cake and ice cream. Besides that there were cigars for the men and candy for the women.

High spot in the party came when Archbishop Curley, accompanied by Archbishop Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate, visited the dining room of the colored women. Here Sister Mathilde, a nun born in Ireland and educated in Scotland and France, acted as mistress of ceremonies.

The star performer was Regina Taylor, born a slave 81 years ago, who sang in English, Italian and French. She sang "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Santa Lucia" and the aria of a French opera. The two archbishops were charmed.

Marie Carter, 85 but sprightly, did an old plantation shuffle, while the other colored women gave the high-ranking ecclesiastics some real Southern harmony.

Archbishop Curley said he had experienced a far better time than he possibly could have had at a hotel banquet, and he and the Apostolic Delegate gave a joint blessing to the old folk and good Mother Celestine and the other Little Sisters.

U. S. Isolation Helped War, Dr. Ryan Says at Peace Parley

America's failure to participate in the League of Nations was an indirect cause of the current European war, Msgr. John A. Ryan last night told delegates of the Catholic Association for International Peace at Catholic University.

Climaxing the two-day annual Peace Conference, Dr. Ryan's talk urged the United States to participate in a "Family of Nations" for the promotion of a permanent peace.

He warned, however, that any peace established in the near future might "represent a compromise with evil, that . . . would permit the consolidation of Hitler's conquests and the continuation of his efforts to paganize the German people."

When asked what means might be used in working for peace, Msgr. Ryan said that he frankly did not know. He urged that all Catholics follow closely the activities of existing peace organizations for an answer.

Dr. Ryan stated that "no peace . . . will be just and durable which does not leave the German nation intact and make some provision for Germany's international economic needs."

Msgr. Ryan's talk followed committee meetings and an Executive Council Dinner held earlier in the day. Today's program includes a luncheon and speeches at the Mayflower Hotel.

House Rejects 210 Millions In Farm Bill

Senate Additions Cut Off, Measure Goes to Conference

By International News Service

Presaging a battle, the House yesterday rejected Senate amendments adding $210,000,000 to the Agricultural Department supply bill, and sent the measure to conference.

Speaker Bankhead appointed Representatives Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri; Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, and Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, to the conference committee. Cannon said the conferees would back up the House stand.

When the measure originally passed the House, it provided $713,896,084 for the Department of Agriculture for the next fiscal year, but made no provision for parity payments or purchase of surplus farm commodities.

The Senate wrote in $212,000,000 for parity payments, and $85,000,000 for surplus commodity purchases. Trimming other items, the Senate bill totaled $923,000,000 in direct appropriations. The Senate, however, wrote in authorizations for RFC loans of $50,000,000 for farm tenancy, and $40,000,000 for rural electrification.

Meanwhile the House Agricultural Committee dropped action on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's certificate plan, proposed by Wallace as a substitute for processing taxes outlawed by the Supreme Court.

House Kills D. C. Sales Tax; King Advocates Real Estate Levy Be Raised

Nichols Chides Members For Failure to Weigh Program in Debate

dolph and Nichols on the floor and in the corridor urged members as they responded to the roll call to vote no.

"Vote 'no' against the sales tax," he advised as the members trooped into the House.

Representative James Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio, started the filibuster when he raised a point of no quorum after Nichols had made his motion that the House go into committee of the whole. This brought a roll call.

Nichols was refused unanimous consent to bring a District official tax expert on the floor and divide time for debate equally between the majority and minority.

Schafer Objects to Both

"I object," shouted Representative John C. Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to each. He suggested that the revenue bill be put aside and that the Schulte milk bill be called up in its place.

After the second roll call, Nichols asked leave to speak for five minutes. Obviously angry, he chided the members who had asked the District Committee to amend the local income tax law to save their constituents in Washington from triple taxation.

"The District Committee feels it has discharged its duty to the members who asked their people be saved from having to pay three income taxes," he said.

"By your action today you leave the income-taxlaw, which was ill-advised and bad law, on the statute books. I presume that is the sense of the House. Had you permitted an explanation of the bill, I dare say 50 per cent of those who voted against consideration would have favored the bill."

Recalling that he had been responsible for the repeal of the 60-40 lump sum law, Nichols said he believed the residents of Washington should be permitted to "pay the cost of their government and thus take the burden off your constituents."

Nichols charged that the opposition to the proposed sales tax came chiefly from residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia who work in the Capital.

Treasury Loans Possible

Calling attention to the anticipated District deficit, Nichols said the District's recourse would be to borrow money from the United States Treasury, as permitted under a recent amendment to the income tax act, and that the burden thus would fall "upon your constituents."

The exact amount of the anticipated deficit was uncertain yesterday as the House subcommittee on District appropriations will not report the 1941 District supply bill until tomorrow.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan told the District Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday that the District will end the current fiscal year with a deficit of $1,000,000 and an estimated $1,800,000 deficit at the end of the next fiscal year if the Budget Bureau recommendations are adopted in the supply bill.

Chairman Millard Caldwell, of the House subcommittee, has indicated, however, that the budget total has been cut close to $1,000,000, which would reduce the 1941 deficit to approximately $800,000.

Ethyl Practices Ruled Monopoly

the capital stock of the Ethyl Corporation.

The Supreme Court opinion affirmed a ruling by the Southern New York Federal District Court which enjoined the corporation from requiring jobbers to procure licenses in order to handle the product.

The court found that the corporation holds two patents on the composition of the ethyl fluid. The opinion does not question the corporation's right, under these patents, to impose certain conditions on refineries purchasing the fluid.

Further patents, covering the formula for mixture of gasoline and ethyl, as well as the resulting product, were the basis of the corporation's claim to control conditions under which jobbers could resell the ethyl-treated gasoline they had purchased from the refineries.

The court ruled that the only "basic" patents were those on the composition of the Ethyl fluid.

Resale Control Forbidden

After the refiners have sold the fuel to the jobbers, Justice Stone said, neither the Ethyl corporation nor the refiners "may longer rely on the patents to exercise any control over the price at which the fuel may be resold."

In other actions yesterday the court:

Ruled that New York City's 2 per cent sales tax cannot be applied to fuel sold by the Gulf Oil Corporation for use of outgoing ocean liners.

Consented to review the constitutionality of a 1939 Pennsylvania law compelling aliens to register annually and carry an identification card.

Radio Decision Reversed

Held that the Federal Communications Commission, in considering an application for a permit for a new radio station, need not consider the effect such competition would have on an existing station. The opinion reversed a ruling by the District Court of Appeals.

Refused to review a decision by the Fifth Federal Circuit Court holding that the Federal Constitution affords no protection against private interference with freedom of speech and of the press. The case involves five men accused of conspiracy to prevent Henry P. Ewald, executive editor of Mobile Daily Newspapers, Inc., from continuing an antigambling campaign.

Inquiry Into SEC Is Asked in House

Power Policy Committee had been "fair and impartial," and what effect the laws under which they are operating have on employment, general economic conditions and the ability of private industry to raise capital.

"Maladjustment" Charged

There have been "insistent demands from the country," Thorkelson's resolution says, for amendments to the acts administered by the SEC "with a view to correcting manifest injustices, erroneous interpretations and unauthorized regulations."

The charge has been made, the resolution explains, that the acts have contributed to the present "economic maladjustment," and that the SEC has gone beyond the authority of law in its regulations and interpretations.

Crawford said a number of House Democrats wanted the SEC investigated, but that there was no inclination on the Democratic side of the chamber to take the initiative.

Hoarding Encouraged

"I think the Securities Acts and the Utility Holding Company Act administered by the SEC have contributed greatly toward driving people away from private enterprise, and have encouraged people to hoard, to sit tight, and to buy Government obligations of one kind or another," he said.

Both resolutions were referred to the Rules Committee.

Submission of the resolutions follows demands in the securities markets for an investigation of the SEC. The Investment Bankers Association, in a letter a week ago to Chairman Jerome N. Frank, of the SEC, asked the commission to suggest to Congress a reexamination of the acts administered by it with a view to removing business deterrents "unnecessary for the protection of investors or the public."

The SEC, in a reply next day, accused the association of "ill-tempered obstructionism and Government-baiting."

George P. Rea, president of the New York Curb Exchange, in a speech last week, urged his hearers to impress on Representatives in Congress the need for revamping the securities acts if idle money is to be put to work to provide jobs for the unemployed.

issue. After Senator Guffey had defended extension of the act (which is due to expire this June), Senator Davis jumped to his feet with a roaring attack on the present measure as one that has damaged Pennsylvania agriculture and industry.

Senator Guffey followed Chairman Harrison's example in citing Republican proponents of the reciprocal trade agreements principle. "Yet," he said, "partisanship appears to be the only remaining barrier to passage of this legislation."

While the Senate debated, the National Grange sent a letter to all Senators asking for "joint Congressional ratification" of the agreements, and asserting that it is "a very grave mistake and a perversion of fundamental principles for Congress to delegate legislative power to the Executive branch of the Government."

Parley Set Today On Extension Of Va. Parkway

Joshed on Name Like Suspect's, Man Hangs Self

New York, March 25 (INS).—The boys at the Mill Comb Manufacturing Company were pretty sorry tonight they had kidded Foreman Aristide (Frenchy) Blain so much.

When the newspapers said police were searching for a man nicknamed Frenchie in a murder case, the fellows in the shop began joshing.

They found Frenchy Blain's body today, hanging in the shop. To his wife, he had written this note:

"I am wrongfully suspected of murder, but I am glad that you know that I am innocent as you are, and your daughters know that I have always been home before 12 o'clock at night."

Police said the suspect named Frenchie had been cleared long ago.

Kemp Named Budget Counsel By Roosevelt

Murphy's Friend Resigns as Assistant To Attorney General

Edward G. Kemp, close friend of Justice Murphy of the Supreme Court, resigned yesterday as assistant to the Attorney General and was appointed by President Roosevelt to a newly created job as counsel for the Budget Bureau.

He will be sworn in at the Budget Bureau today.

In a letter to Kemp, the President said he considered it a "fortunate circumstance" that, although Kemp was resigning one position, he was continuing in the public service. The President expressed appreciation for the work Kemp had done in the Justice Department, and hoped "you will find happiness in your new duties."

Provision is made in the January budget estimates for the position of Budget Bureau counsel. This indicated that an appointment would be made to the job, effective July 1. Funds are available, however, it is understood, for Kemp's salary for the remainder of this fiscal year.

Kemp was appointed to the Justice Department post by Murphy, then Attorney General. His new job pays between $8,000 and $9,000 a year, but it is regarded as unlikely that he will receive less than the $9,000 which he drew at the Justice Department. Murphy is said to have recommended Kemp to the District judgeship vacancy to which United States Attorney David A. Pine was appointed.

Finns Buy Five Boats

By Frank L. Kluckhohn

Copyright by New York Times

Finland has ordered five modern motor torpedo boats in the United States within the past week, it was said yesterday by Colonel Per Zileiacus, Finnish military attache.

The purchase was taken in diplomatic circles to mean that Finland, although finally forced to make peace with the Soviet Union, is determined to defend what remains of its territory, even though vital defense lines were ceded to Russia, along with strategic bases.

The boats were ordered after the signing of the peace treaty, Colonel Zileiacus said. The treaty provided that Finland could maintain only coastal patrol boats, but the military attache explained that this provision applied only to operations along the northern coast of Finland, and not to the Baltic where the "vest pocket" warships will be stationed.

The boats are to be between 50 and 70 feet long. They will be capable of speeds of over 50 miles an hour and will carry several torpedo tubes, in addition to regular arms. They will be similar to the craft ordered by the American Navy, and will be built at New Orleans.

Income's Rise May Rescue U.S. Debt Limit

Official 'Guesses' At $400,000,000 In Extra Revenue

By Irving Perlmeter.

Associated Press Staff Writer

High Administration officials claimed yesterday that unexpectedly large income tax returns made it probable the Treasury could stay under the $45,000,000,000 debt limit without new taxes at least through April, 1941.

This would give the President and Congress elected this fall plenty of time, they said, to take whatever action they consider necessary. The debt limit is fixed by law, and Congress might be expected either to move it to a higher figure or increase taxes.

Barring unforeseen business developments or unscheduled big appropriations, the officials continued, the Treasury might be able to stay under the debt limit through the next fiscal year ending June 30, 1941.

May Get 400 Million Extra

One authoritatively guessed that taxes on 1939 income would beat the forecasts by $300,000,000.

Adding to this the fact that other Treasury revenues—such as gasoline and tobacco taxes—are running ahead of schedule, he said it was probable that total revenues would exceed the budget by $400,000,000 in the next 15 months.

Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress in January to vote $460,000,000 of additional defense taxes to avoid raising the debt limit. Since the news of favorable tax returns, however, Congressional leaders have virtually given up the idea.

2½ Billion to Go

Not even the unbudgeted farm parity fund of $212,000,000 which the Senate voted last week disheartened the officials figuring on the debt limit. They pointed out that except for about $50,000,000 to growers of winter wheat, the proposed parity payments actually would not be disbursed until after June 30, 1941.

At last count the Treasury's debt was $42,520,613,412. This was higher than any figure on record, but still was roughly $2,500,000,000 below the limit.

Deficits are slated to average $330,000,000 a month this fiscal year, ending June 30, and about $180,000,000 a month in the next fiscal year. The averages may prove lower because of the revenue situation.

3 Held in Murders Talk to Save Lives

disclosed the existence of the ring a week ago last Sunday after questioning one Abraham (Pretty) Levine.

In the next eight days, Dwyer's investigation allegedly linked the organization, in addition to slayings, with numerous rackets, including extortion, prostitution, slot machines, policy games, bookmaking, loan sharks and bail bonds.

Meanwhile, in blunt words, Assistant District Attorney Burton Turkus drove home the ruthlessness of thec rime combine's triggermen still at large—presumably acting under orders from a fugitive "master mind."

The illustration was pointed when Workman, who is held in $25,000 bail on a technical charge of vagrancy, appeared briefly with his attorney before Supreme Court Justice Phillip Brennan and indignantly protested against such high bail for a simple charge.

"It's an outrage," he muttered.

"It would be an outrage if he were released on bail—an outrage against justice," Turkus said.

"Workman is marked for death. It would be the same as signing an execution order if he were turned loose now. The gang is waiting to put him on the spot."

Wrokman's air of bravado quickly vanished. He gulped and meekly returned to jail shackled to Tannenbaum. The latter's efforts to obtain a reduction of bail at the same hearing were short-circuited by a warrant charging him with first degree murder in the slaying of Irving Ashkenas, Brooklyn taxi driver and small fry mobster, on September 5, 1936, near Loch Sheldrake in upstate Sullivan County.

Turkus said Tannenbaum had been indicted for committing a "contract murder" under assignment by the kill-for-cash syndicate.

Witness Threatened

O'Dwyer said he would need two grand juries and an extra judge to sift the mass of evidence already piled up in the widening investigation.

He also disclosed that an anonymous telephone threat to "bump off" one of his witnesses, Florence Nestfield, 28, had led him to double a 24-hour police guard at her Brooklyn home.

Miss Nestfield had identified Max Golob and Frank (The Dasher) Abbadando as the killers who pumped eight bullets into her sweetheart, John (Spider) Murtha, in Brooklyn five years ago.

On the eve of the opening of the Bronx grand jury's investigation into the "mistake murder" of Irving Penn, 42, music publisher, Bronx Prosecutor Samuel J. Foley questioned Lazarus Black, 27, of Brooklyn, held in $20,000 bail as a material witness.

Penn was shot down as he left his Bronx home last July 25. Officials said he had been killed by the Brooklyn "contract" slayers, who mistook him for an informer against Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, racketeer.

Foley said he had a witness who saw Black, a "hustler" in a dice game operated by the Brooklyn mob, "place the guns in the murder car when it left Brooklyn."

Dozen Rounded Up

O'Dwyer and his aides rounded up about a dozen men during Holy Week and pending grand jury action they are being held on charges ranging from vagrancy to homicide.

The district attorney said they were connected with the rapidly increasing number of murder solutions, and some of them, he added, had been disclosing their own and others' participation in offenses ranging from petty slugging to slaying.

The Brooklyn murder ring, O'Dwyer said, had undertaken to kill visitors to New York, members of their own clique and others "fingered" for death for various reasons at rates as low as a dollar a death.

$5 for a Life

Several murders, the district attorney added, had been committed for $5 and $10 each; and one, a three-day job involving hotel room rental and other expenses totaling $17, was executed for $20.

O'Dwyer said the ring controlled many minor rackets, including extortion from business houses, "protection" of prostitutes, the rental of pinball and slot machines, policy and bookmaking.

One of the most lucrative enterprises, he said, was that of the loan sharks, who were closely knit with the gang and maintained criminal relations with similar organizations in other cities.

The gang, according to O'Dwyer, used experienced killers or merely apprentices who obeyed orders in fear of their own lives.

Chamberlain May Probe Peace Agitation

3 Groups Condemn War; Press Charges Goebbels Is Winning

By W. F. Leysmith.
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 25.—Stop-the-war advocates showed such remarkable strength during week-end Laborite and political conferences that Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to examine this new complication immediately upon his return to London.

Simultaneously the Daily Mail in an outspoken editorial draws the attention of the government to the "extent that the German broadcasts are influencing, no only the civilian population of Great Britain, but also our armed forces."

Thus far the government has hesitated to "jam" the German broadcasts because, primarily it is fighting for such liberties as free speech; and secondly, "jamming" is a two-edged weapon. Resulting losses might be even greater than what might be gained by silencing "Lord Haw Haw," as the German announcer in English has been nicknamed.

Goebbels Winning, Paper Says

Still many are in agreement with the Daily Mail today that on the battlefield of propaganda Great Britain has been "decisively beaten."

To what extent Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels has influenced the "peace now" vote at the week-end conference of the Cooperative Party cannot, of course, be estimated.

The fact remains that delegates representing 1,323,000 members, supported a resolution condemning the war as imperialistic, demanding an immediate armistice and calling for an international workers' conference to insure that any peace should be based upon certain principles. They were beaten by a counter vote of delegates representing 3,250,000 members after the leader of the Cooperative movement, Albert V. Alexander, had warned that "by having a world conference now we should be giving a message to the neutrals that we could under no circumstances be relied upon to give them assistance."

Labor Party Abused

The Labor Party, which itself is solidly behind the Chamberlain government for the prosecution of the war, came in for abuse at the annual meeting of the Independent Labor Party at Nottingham yesterday. Dr. C. A. Smith, president, declared thatthe Labor Party for some time has "been more enthusiastically imperialist, patriotic and bellicose than the tories."

The Independent Laborites then adopted a resolution which described war as imperialist and urged that it should be ended, but insisted that there could be no enduring peace while the "capitalist-imperialist" system continued. Nevertheless the speakers emphasized that they were having no dealings with Josef Stalin.

At Leeds yesterday delegates of the National Union of Clerks carried a resolution for an immediate armistice outlining terms for a Socialist peace. An amendment condemning the aggression of Germany and Russia, and declaring that defeat for the Allies would mean the end of free trade unionism in Great Britain was defeated.

London, March 25 (AP).—Pressure grew heavier today for a rebuilt government, concentrating the nation's economic, maritime and military in fewer hands. A war cabinet of five ministers, instead of the present nine, was suggested.

Under this plan First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill would speak for the land, sea and air forces as well as the ministries of supply and shipping. The five-man cabinet would be composed of Prime Minister Chamberlain, Churchill, Chancelor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and Lord Privy Seal Sir Samuel Hoare.

The present war cabinet includes these four as well: Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood, War Secretary Oliver Stanley, Minister Without Portfolio Lord Hankey and Minister for Coordination of Defense Lord Chatfield.

Teleki, Hungarian Premier, Visits British Envoy in Rome; Blockade Believed Discussed

By Camille M. Cianfarra.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 25.—Count Paul Teleki, the Hungarian premier, after a two-and-a-half-hour conversation with Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, today saw Sir Noel Charles, British charge d'affaires.

This meeting caused considerable speculation and reports were rife in Rome tonight that they had discussed the British blockade, which is affecting Hungary's economic life.

It was learned this evening that Andre Francois-Poncet, the French ambassador, who was scheduled to leave for Paris today, had postponed his visit. This change was connected with the strong anti-French and anti-British campaign in the Italian press in order to convince the people that England and France are bent on finding a new battlefield in the southeast.

(At the same time, Raffaele Guariglia, Italian ambassador in Paris, had his first interview with the new French premier and foreign minister, Paul Reynaud.)

The Italian press campaign is believed to be heralding a new move in Italian foreign policy which will doubtless be against the Allies. It would not be surprising if this development concerned the oft-announced understanding among Italy, Germany and Russia which is supposed to be in the offing.

Attacks on Russia have stopped since the conclusion of the Finnish-Russian peace. No editorials have yet suggested an improvement of relations between Moscow and Rome. This, it is believed, is only the first stage of the new diplomatic phase which should be concluded with the Italo-German-Russian understanding on eastern Europe.

[French political circles, however, indicated there was no undue alarm about probabilities in the Balkans, the Associated Press said. The French seemed to believe that the elements for a successful Russian-German-Italian bloc to control the Balkans do not exist.—Editor's note.]

Rumors on Conference

Rome, March 25 (AP).—Diplomatic circles said tonight that at Fuehrer Hitler's talk with Premier Mussolini a week ago Hitler suggested a reinforcement of Italian troops on the French frontier to divert several French divisions from the Maginot Line so Germany could launch a spring offensive there.

This suggestion was said to have met with the Italian argument that such reinforcements would be hard to justify. Confirmation was lacking, but informed Italian circles have indicated plainly that no action is contemplated which might change Italy's nonbelligerency.

Oslo-London Rift Develops Over Blockade

Norway Protest Charges Infractions Of Coastal Regions

By International News Service

London, March 25.—A diplomatic clash between Britain and Norway developed tonight out of the expanding British naval drive to break Germany's sea connections with Scandinavia.

In the face of a protest from Oslo against alleged British violations of Norwegian territorial waters, authoritative London sources asserted Britain is determned to press her new campaign against German ships bearing Swedish iron ore and other war materials.

These quarters, however, insisted British submarines, warships and warplanes are doing their work in scrupulous compliance with international law.

Two German cargo carriers have already been sunk, and a third chased aground in four days as a result of the extension of Britain's blockade patrols into areas close to the Skaggerak-Kattegat entrance to the Baltic near the shores of Norway and Denmark.

The Oslo protest was filed at the British foreign office today by Norwegian Minister Colban. It was understood to refer only to alleged British aerial infractions of Norway's coastal regions. Additional Norwegian protests, concerning at least two alleged British warship violations, were expected in London.

The British reply was expected to outline wartime necessities. A spokesman said the British "are not going to be placed in a position of not being able to use the same weapon against Germany as Germany is using indiscriminately against British and neutral shipping."

German assertions that British warships and warplanes are "systematically violating" neutral waters were flatly denied.

British Warships Active

Copenhagen, March 25 (U.P.).—British warships were reported active off Scandinavia's Atlantic shores today, apparently under orders to pay less attention to legal red tape and to stop this important gap in the blockade of Germany.

The British detachments were believed to include several light, fast destroyers and two heavier destroyers in addition to the British submarines which already have sunk the German freighters Heddernheim and Edmund Hugo Stinnes.

Danish Ship Sinks, 13 Missing

Copenhagen, March 25 (AP).—The 1,146-ton Danish freighter Britta sank off the coast of Scotland this morning, with 13 of her crew of 18 missing. First reports did not give the cause.

City Invited to Join In Pan American Anniversary Fete

Washington business and civic leaders yesterday were invited to join in observance of Pan American Week—April 8 to 15—in a special proclamation issued by the District Commissioners.

The proclamation read in part:

"We do hereby call upon the people of the District of Columbia to join in the observance of Pan American week and the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union and invite the merchants of the District to display flags . . . and to arrange . . . ceremonies that will emphasize the cordial friendship toward other American republics."

Welfare Board Decides to Hold Open Sessions

A new policy of conducting open meetings, probably quarterly, was announced yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare.

In matters pertaining to program or policy the board will open its doors to the public, said Robert Bondy, welfare director. He added, however, that executive sessions would continue on personnel, budget and specific relief cases.

HR 8694 Is of Vital Import to Theatergoers

Local Stage Again Deprived of Major Event by That Child Labor Law Provision; Robert Speaight Superb in T. S. Eliot Drama

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B Bell.

HOUSE BILL 8694 may hardly sound like a matter of interest to theatergoers, but its passage is a matter of deep importance to the legitimate theater in Washington.

Under the terms of the District Child Labor Law as it now stands, juveniles under 18 are prohibited from taking part in professional performances. To be sure, there are certain conditions under which these juveniles may appear professionally until 7 p. m., if they have received a special permit, but under present regulations, plays which require the services of juveniles in effect are barred to local theatergoers. House Bill 8694 seeks to amend this situation.

Manager Edmund Plohn of the National Theater has just been forced to cancel the prior-to-Broadway booking of William Saroyan's latest play, "Love's Old Sweet Song," because of this statute. It is this cancellation that has brought from the experienced manager a statement that at once defines the situation and prompts hopes of the amendment's passage.

The Theater Guild and Eddie Dowling, joint producers of the work by the latest white hope of American playwrights, were eager to open the play here because Walter Huston, playing the leading role, has long been an avowed favorite of President Roosevelt. But when Manager Plohn discovered that several juveniles were necessary for the presentation of the play, he was forced, reluctantly, to erase the booking.

"Life With Father," performed with such elan for the President's Birthday Celebration, may never return to the local boards because children are so important in its action. Only because it was played for charity did Washington see the comedy hit. Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" was forced to revise one of its most effective scenes here because of the presence of a minor. "The Old Maid," a Pulitzer Prize Play, can never be given here nor can the highly-praised "The Children's Hour." Katharine Cornell's "Wingless Victory" employed the services of a midget for its local engagement. Miss Hepburn's "The Philadelphia Story" used a mature girl for a child's role and Miss Barrymore was supported in "Whiteoaks" by a young woman playing the role of a 12-year-old boy.

The list could go on for some columns. However, it does indicate some of the artistic losses of the local theater.

But that is not the only angle to this business.

"To maintain its place as one of the few outposts of the speaking stage," Manager Plohn continues, "and to keep the legitimate theater alive against mounting costs, conditions which operate to bring about 'dark weeks' must be reduced. In operation the District Child Labor Law forbids the booking of attractions whose engagement might properly represent the margin of profit over a season's operation."

So, for the theater, it is an economic problem as well as an artistic one.

Bill 8694 wound amend the Child Labor Law so that juveniles would be permitted to appear in the professional theater after the Board of Education has determined that neither health, morals or education would be jeopardized by such employment.

"I need hardly say," concludes Mr. Plohn, "that this legislation is most heartily indorsed by the Actors Equity Association and by a score of the largest civic organizations in Washington. The amendment was drawn up by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, in cooperation with the United States Department of Labor and was presented with the approval of the District Commissioners."

T. S. Eliot's poetic drama, "Murder in the Cathedral," is being superbly played this week by the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, with Robert Speaight performing the role of Thomas a Becket, which he created at Canterbury Cathedral and subsequently played in England for over 700 performances.

No common play is this drama of the martyred archbishop, but a work of superb dignity in line and expression. Until this production Washington had not seen the play and that the students are currently associated with a professional of Mr. Speaight's standing is particularly fortunate both for them and the local public.

The English actor's magnificent voice, so remarkably controlled, brings to the local scene the finest reading of the season. The fluidity with which the chorus of Canterbury women speak the lines, the striking direction and imaginative lighting all make this difficult drama strangely vibrant. Written originally by the poet for a few performances to benefit the Cathedral fabric, its ensuing success is the more amazing. The serious minded theatergoer will find it one of the gems of the present season, amateur or professional.

Mr. Speaight will play his Becket at the University Theater through Wednesday evening.

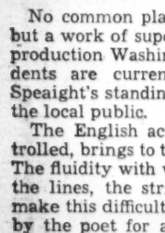
Lopert, he being the sound technician who took to importing foreign films as a hobby; among those he brought across the pond are "Carnival in Flanders," "Grand Illusion" and "End of a Day." The Belasco's next is "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," opening Thursday as a first-run. The Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony and Savoy Theaters are matineeing every day this Easter week. An all-cartoon program is billed at the Seco tomorrow at 2 p. m. Gray Gordon's Tic Toc Rhythm, on the Capitol stage a while back, goes into the Wardman Park tonight.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 24.

I believe in passing on the good with the bad, and here's one of the sweetest stories I've heard in ages. It concerns that eminent composer, Richard Hagaman. Some months ago an unknown tenor came to him and said it was the ambition of his life to sing his debut recital with Mr. Hageman at the piano. He was so sincere and had so much to offer that Mr. H. consented. The date of the concert was set for February 29. The day before Mr. H. was notified that he would receive the Award for his score in "Stage Coach" from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and that of course, he must be present at the dinner to accept it. His answer was, "I'm terribly sorry, but I'm playing a concert in Pasadena that night."



HOPPER

It was pointed out that an appearance at the dinner meant prestige, national publicity, all the rest, he said: "I'm sorry, but I have promised a rising young tenor I'd play for him, and I wouldn't let him down for all the Academy Awards in the world." And he didn't. The boy's name is Arthur Renton. He's a native son, and on his way . . .

You now how family can cramp your style! John Payne can't make love to another woman when his wife, Ann Shirley, is looking on. Neither can Basil Rathbone. In fact, that applies to most wives. Only exception I can think of is Zorina, whose husband, Balanchine, also her director, says, "Darling, you didn't put enough oomph in that iss. Let's do it over."

Mervyn Le Roy's 4-year-old son hears his father talk so much about pictures that he knows all about casts, etc. And calls his father "Mervyn"—you know, man-to-man relationship. The other night when Mrs. Le Roy phoned her husband if he'd be late for dinner again, soi Warner said to her, "Is Mervyn coming?" "What do you mean by Mervyn?" she kidded. The boy said, "You know—the ma nwho left this morning to direct Vivien Leigh."

Big Crosby had his 7-year-old son, Gary, on the set of "If I Had My Way" which he's making with Glory Jean. That night Gary said: "Pop, it's happened." "What?" asked Bing. "I'm in love — with Gloria." "Well," said Bing, "who isn't?" . . .

He Has a Song to Sing-o

ALINE MacMAHON, HARRY CAREY, JOHN GARFIELD in "Heavenly Express," by Albert Bein, which opened last night at the National Theater. Returning three film players to the stage, the play marks Mr. Garfield's first appearance on the boards since his marked success in films, is Miss MacMahon's first on a local stage in some seasons and is Mr. Carey's first "legit" excursion in 28 years

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

WHEN THOMAS E. DEWEY was in Washington recently he spoke to a minor New Deal official with whom he is friendly, and asked for a favor. "It's an important favor," said Dewey, "and you'll have to pull some strings—but don't be unethical about it" . . . The official said: "All right, Tom. What's the favor?" . . . "I want," replied Dewey, "to do some research at the Library of Congress."

RENE BLUM, BROTHER of Leon Blum, will announce his option to bring the entire Comedie Francaise to New York for two months. The trip will be sponsored by the French government. Opening night seats will cost $100 each . . . Giovanni, the sleight-of-hand trickster who lifted the suspenders from the unsuspecting J. Edgar Hoover at the White House correspondents' dinner, didn't return them to the G-man. Giovanni now wears them . . . Wendel Willkie will continue his Presidential boom in a forthcoming article in Fortune, called "We, the People."

IN HOLLYWOOD Joe Pasternak previewed his latest picture, "It's a Date"—the new Deanna Durbin film—and was pleased at its reception. He went to a restaurant and gathered around him a number of friends and employes—including Henry Koster, Felix Jackson, Joe May, Fritz Van Donger and many other emigres whose foreign successes Pasternak has helped repeat in this country . . . They drank only once—when the radio was turned on and they heard the faint strains of "You'll Remember Vienna."

STEPHEN LONGSTREET, author of the best-seller, "Decade," has completed his first full-length play, a farce, in collaboration with Clarence Greene. Producers now are reading it . . . Maxfield Parrish contributed to the National Roadside Council a design showing a billboard with a huge inkspot on it, and a sign reading, "Buy Products Not Advertised On Our Roadsides" . . . The cast of "Reunion in Vienna" will give a benefit performance on March 31 for an Emmanuel Eisenberg Fund—in honor of the show's press agent, who lost his life in that plane accident . . . Harriet Brent, who used to teach economics at De Witt Clinton High School, will make her local debut as a night-club singer at the Lido.

JAMES CANNON'S Hawaiian princess is returning from Honolulu next month to resume their romance. His friends, however, doubt whether Cannon really is serious . . . "Remember what Kipling said," he was reminded. "Kipling said 'East is East, and West is West, and ne'er the twain shall meet" . . . "Kipling was a former newspaper man, and so am I," replied Cannon. "So it's only his word against mine."

WARNER BROTHERS MADE a film-short of the Academy Dinner, but found it necessary to make some re-takes . . . They called David Selznick to secure his permission, inasmuch as his company had won 10 out of the 18 academy awards . . . Selznick gave his permission, but before he hung up he said that he had one question to ask . . . "Tell me," asked the producer of "Gone With the Wind," "confidentially—how did I screen?"

National Play Novel Fantasy Of Rail Hoboes

John Garfield Returns To Stage in Bein's 'Heavenly Express'

By Richard L. Coe.

"Heavenly Express" is like no other play you ever have seen. It's a fantasy of hoboes and railroadin', of roundhouses and heaven, of earthbound souls and hell, of a joyful philosophy among people who are not thought to have any. However puzzling it is, "Heavenly Express" is fascinating, stimulating theater.

Last evening's first nighters at the National Theater were obviously puzzled by Albert Bein's unorthodox drama, but they were as obviously intrigued by the play which brings back from Hollywood three players who know well the arts of the stage, John Garfield, Aline MacMahon and Harry Carey.

Bein's play is very much in the spirit of those with which William Saroyan and Clifford Odets are forming a new force in the American drama. It tells of the down-and-outers in their own sometimes incomprehensible language and how they feel about living and dying.

John Garfield's hobo is no ordinary mortal. He is the young Overland Kid who, by rights, should have died when he fell from the fast freight 19 years ago. But the boss hobo, "a mountain-and-a-half tall and wearing corduroy pants," had other plans and The Overland Kid is now a sort of messenger for the "Boss Bo." He sees to it the Golden Rule is followed by the "boes" and acts as advance ticket seller for the "Heavenly Express" or the "Hellbound Manifest" as the case may be. His shuttling around of the train that obeys no signals causes complete consternation.

As its title declares, this time The Overland Kid is working with the Heavenly Express, the train that rides when the snow is falling, the moon is out and the stars are shining. His ticket is for a faithful mother, boarding house keeper Betsy Graham, who has spent the latter part of her life caring for the "boes" because her son, rather than work on the Union Pacific, ran off to ride the rails. She always believed in her son, though, and The Overland Kid rewards them both.

Garfield's playing of this role is sheer magic. He walks with a spring, sings with a melancholy happiness, leaps with a light ecstasy. A difficult role, he projects it with loving humor.

Miss MacMahon as the mother, Mr. Carey as a bewildered old-time engineer who recognizes "The Overland Kid," Philip Loeb, as a hopeful hobo, contribute performances that are nicely etched with humor and understanding. Harry Bratsburg, a former Civic Theater player, scores as one of Mother Graham's boarders.

As yet, to be sure, the play is slow in getting under way, with a too-long conversation piece in the first scene which, while it does establish a mood could well be shortened. Too, there are climactic scenes which should be more strongly pointed.

Interpolated songs, including "Old Rock Candy Mountain," "Poor Wayfaring Stranger" and "Hobo Convention," as arranged by Lohman Engel, bring enormous color to the piece.

While "Heavenly Express" may completely confound you, it will also warm the cockles of your heart. You won't know why, but it will.

Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Dear Staff: Here's a tip for you to pass along to radio comedians—and if they don't thank you for it, they're an ungrateful lot.

FIDLER

Tell them, for heaven's sake, to stop making allegedly funny cracks about the too apparent lack of humor on the part of their audiences. I don't know how many people I have met on this tour who have complained about radio comedians reprimanding them verbally because they failed to laugh at the comic's jokes.

I know the habit had always annoyed me, but until I talked with others, I thought perhaps it was a private irk and I kept my annoyance to myself. But, as a lady said to me yesterday, she feels like dialing out comedians who tell jokes and then, getting no laugh, insult audiences with "Well, guess I wasted my time with that one" or "Other people thought it was funny." There are a number of similar stock remarks which I presume were originated to cover the dull silence that sometimes follows a flat joke.

If a joke is good, the audience will laugh. If it isn't good, the best thing to do is let it lie and get into the next story or routine as quickly as possible. That way, the audience will forget the bad ones. But if the comedian keeps reminding his listeners that his stories are bum, how can those listeners forget?

And just to prove that I talk from experience: On this tour I am making, I spend half my stage time rushing from one joke to another, to "cover" the chasm-like silence that too often greets my efforts. You boys who try to tell me jokes back at the office—you know how it is.

J. F.

Dear Boss: We're dreadfully upset to hear you're experiencing so much "chasm-like silence." Furthermore, we're deeply puzzled, for we thought those jokes of yours would be sure-fire ribticklers. To our certain knowledge, people had been laughing at them for years!

Maybe you'll be desperate enough to add this one to your repertoire. A week or so ago, W. B.'s production czar, Hal Wallis, rewarded Writer Robert Buckner's work by giving him a six-week vacation—also urgent advice to spend his time off in Sun Valley, Idaho. Yesterday Wallis received a postcard from Mr. Buckner. Postmarked "Sun Valley," it read: "Having wonderful time—wish I could afford it!"

D.C. Depositors Lose $480,000 In Court Ruling

Commercial National Must Pay U. S. 100%, Justices Find

A decision by the United States Supreme Court cost depositors of the closed Commercial National Bank a chance to collect more than $480,000 yesterday.

The decision, entitling Government agencies with funds on deposit to 100 per cent collection, was expected to have no effect on depositors of a second bank involved in the case—the District National.

The District bank, it was learned authoritatively, has remaining assets which are expected to make possible 100 per cent to all depositors. Dividends representing 85 per cent of deposits already have been paid.

Deposits at the Commercial National totaled $1,603,535 for the Government agencies involved in the case—the Inland Waterways Corp., the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corp., and the War Department. Each had been paid in full through disposal of securities pledged by the bank to protect the deposit. General depositors of the bank have been paid 70 per cent.

Frederick J. Young, receiver for the bank, pointed out last night that 30 per cent of the total collected by the Federal agencies—or about $480,000—would have been available to all depositors if the banks had won the case.

The War Department had $214,739 in Panama Canal Zone postal funds on deposit in the District National Bank, but inasmuch as depositors are expected to be paid in full, the loss to the bank will be represented by interest on funds already paid the department.

Justus Wardell, receiver for the bank, estimated this difference at $30,000. He said the sum was small in relation to other bank assets.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court held that a national bank may pledge assets to secure deposits by the Secretary of War and the two Federal instrumentalities. The decision, delivered by Justice Frankfurter, reversed rulings of the district court and the United States Court of Appeals upholding the banks' contention that the Government should share assets as other general creditors.

Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Roberts and McReynolds dissented. Justices Reed and Murphy did not participate.

John W. K. Young, Postal Employe, Dies Here at 71

The funeral of John W. K. Young, 71, active Mason and a postoffice employe for 40 years, will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery. Mr. Young died Sunday at his residence, 3901 Georgia avenue northwest.

A native of Pennsylvania, he came here 55 years ago.

He was a member of Acacia odLge, No. 18, Masonic, and Acacia Chapter, O. E. S., of which he was past patron. He was also past high priest of the Royal Arch Masons.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emma H. Young, of this city; a brother, Jacob Young, of Kansas City, and a half-sister, Mrs. Eva Busey, of Washington.

Gannett Assails New Deal Policies

Duluth, Minn., March 25 (AP).—Frank E. Gannett said in a speech here tonight that "four more years of the present Administration policies will bring us ruin and imperil our form of government."

"The dictators in Europe rose to power because of unbearable economic suffering," Gannett said. "A continuation of present conditions will mean further efforts to regulate and control everything and everybody from Washington until we, too, shall have a totalitarian state displacing our democracy."

Marylanders Hear McNutt Deliver Plea for Tolerance

Federal Security Administrator Speaks On 306th Anniversary Program; Lauds Roosevelt's Record of Reform

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 25.—Maryland's traditional free State and President Roosevelt "who has brought the Government back to the people," won praise tonight from Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt at a dinner commemorating the State's 306th birthday.

McNutt, a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said in a speech prepared for delivery at the dinner which was attended by State officials and others that America "will not tolerate" the conditions in dictatorship countries "where the people have lost the will and the power to govern themselves."

Declaring that Maryland "was founded in justice," McNutt said, "freedom of speech and of the press is probably the greatest single pillar of democracy," and added:

"Free expression of opinion is the coreo f Maryland political philosophy."

McNutt said President Roosevelt had revitalized popular government in the United States after "those deceptive twenties" and had stepped forth as a leader that the Nation had followed with trust.

Living, Burning Force

"For the first time in two decades, the people of this country have taken upon themselves the burden of solving momentous issues."

The speaker said these issues included public economy, Government fiscal policies, the national debt, the budget deficit, national defense, old-age security, jobless youth, conservation, crop control and relief and public works.

"Something has come over America these past few years. Some great devotion to country, some driving spiritual force . . .

"Like Wilson and Cleveland and Jackson before him, President Roosevelt has brought the Government back to the people. Democracy has again become a living, burning force in men's lives."

He said this country could safeguard its way of living by strengthening defenses against "everything which characterizes" totalitarian States . . .

"What do they have which we will not tolerate?

"We have government by deliberation. They have government by edict.

"We have the ballot. They have the concentration camp.

"We have the doctrine of the inherent worth and political equality of the common man. They have the doctrine of a favored class and a superior race.

Freedom of Expression

"We have the principle of freedom of expression and freedom of conscience. They have enforced adherence to a single view.

"We have due process of law. They have the Gestapo.

"We have freedom of individual enterprise. They have a regimented economy.

"We have a free labor movement, protected by law. They have a labor battalion, mobilized by force.

"These are things which set us off from those unhappy peoples where individuals are swallowed up by a Frankenstein state, where freedom has been exchanged for a false promise of security. . . .

"Democracy, for all its defects, will survive . . . sometimes, it is true, we forget. But soon a Thomas Paine, an Andrew Jackson, a Franklin Roosevelt rises up to reproach us and we bend our path again toward higher ground."

34th Infantry Plans War Games

The War Department announced yesterday the Thirty-fourth Infantry of Fort George G. Meade, Md., will become part of the "Red Army" during large scale maneuvers near Fort Benning, Ga., next month.

Departure of the regiment for two months of field exercises is set for April 6. After a month of war games in Georgia the Thirty-fourth will move to Louisiana and east Texas as "line of communication troops" for the Third Army in the largest maneuvers in American history.

tion's detour department, the dead man's brother-in-law, said that the former soldier surveyed the high school grounds during a Sunday afternoon walk.

"He seemed to be feeling pretty good then," James Scott said. "He was despondent when he came here Saturday night. He said he would need another operation on his lip to have a cancer removed. But Sunday, after church, we walked around the school and he seemed happier. He even joked a little with the kids."

"When my wife heard the shots, she was upstairs reading the papers which had just come in the mail," Scott said. "A man in Pennsylvania wrote he had found an envelope and forwarded it to her. It contained my brother-in-law's discharge papers from the Army, and a note saying that if anything happened to him we should be notified.

"At my office I got a telegram from a relative in Ohio, saying that he had received a strange letter from my brother-in-law, a letter which said goodbye. He asked me to check on it. About 10 minutes later, my wife telephoned to tell me what had happened."

James T. Scott said his brother-in-law grieved considerably over the death of a sister, Mrs. Nellie Parry, about a year ago. A bachelor, he made his home in Jenkintown with Mrs. Parry and "was devoted to her children," Scott said. "At her death the home was broken up."

The diagrammatic note contained no punctuation. It said: "Dear sister Maggie and cousin Jim on Tuesday morning March 26 you will find my dead body on this space." Underneath was a large square labeled "swimming pool." In the square was written: "In the swimming pool where Peggy and Bill go in swimming the pool down below your place back of the new high school."

Below, to one side, is a second, smaller square, labeled, "Tree" and the note: "On this corner Jim is where you will find my body." A third square is marked "Bench" with the note: "Here I will be."

Mrs. Ellender's Among Tickets 'Adjusted'

Week's Total Is 96; 16 Are Canceled, 68 Drivers Warned

Mrs. Helen E. Ellender, wife of the Louisiana Senator, was among the 96 persons who had traffic tickets "adjusted" last week, police revealed yesterday. Sixty-eight escaped with warning, and 16 tickets were canceled outright.

The weekly list was released under order of the Commissioners.

Mrs. Ellender was charged with parking overtime. She was given a warning after the Senator's secretary wrote a letter to Maj. Ernest W. Brown. Five persons escaped through diplomatic immunity. They were:

Ragna Gable, of the Norwegian legation; Martha M. Rutkowska, of the Polish embassy; Stephen Parayewski, of the Polish embassy; T. M. Santiesteban, of the Cuban embassy, and Dr. Jose Rocca, of the Colombian embassy.

"No Previous Record"

Paul J. Kelley, of 1440 W street northwest, received a warning with the notation: "No previous record. Request of A. Magruder MacDonald, D. C. coroner. Inspector Holmes." Bruce E. Anderson, of 6613 Seventh place northwest, also had his request for a warning countersigned by Traffic Inspector Holmes.

Pat Frank, of Arlington, Va., received a warning for parking overtime because he was detained in the witness room at the District Court. Aubrey A. Edey, of 1332 Belmont street northwest, escaped with a warning because a parking meter was defective. He was charged with parking overtime.

Dentistry Work Is Excuse

Mrs. Clara P. Sitz, of 2800 Thirteenth street northwest, was let off with a warning because she was having a tooth extracted by a dentist and could not leave the office as soon as she expected.

Three men received tickets when they parked in a school zone to go to church. The tickets were canceled because school was not in session. The men were Charles F. Talbot, of Benning Station; Charles F. Kosark, of 2119 Fourth street northeast, and Benedict McLoughlin, of 505 G street southwest.

Californian Who Read Law In Cell Wins New Hearing

Supreme Court Sides With His Argument He Was Denied Counsel in Trial on Charge Of Robbery While Free on Parole

A prisoner in the California State Penitentiary who spends his spare time reading law yesterday won from the United States Supreme Court a new hearing on his 8-year-old conviction on robbery charges.

The petitioner, Frank S. Connor, acting for himself, last November appealed to the high court to review the judgment of the California Supreme Court, which had denied his petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Connor claims he was convicted of robbery in 1932 without benefit of a lawyer's services.

He was on parole from a former conviction at the time of his arrest. Under California law, a parolee must return to jail if arrested. Connor completed the old sentence last August and became eligible to appeal the 1932 conviction, which carried an indeterminate sentence, with a maximum term of life imprisonment.

To his appeal to the California Supreme Court Connor attached a transcript of the 1932 court record, purporting to show that he was not represented by counsel at his arraignment and trial. When the California court denied his appeal, he attached the transcript to his petition to the United States Supreme Court.

The California court asked the high court here to accept a different transcript of proceedings in the Connor case. Its version of the record alleges that Connor was offered counsel.

The Federal court yesterday refused to allow California to change the record and ordered the State to give Connor a new hearing. He was represented before the high court here by H. Thomas Austere, local attorney.

Col. Douglas Potts Will Be Buried Here Tomorrow

Col. Douglas Potts, who died Saturday at Fort Jay, N. Y., will be buried in Arlington Cemetery tomorrow afternoon after 2 o'clock funeral services in Fort Myer Chapel.

Col. Potts was the son of the late Gen. Ramsay Douglas Potts. His brother, Col. John Potts, U. S. M. C., of Alexandria, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Louise Potts McNair, widow of Gen. W. S. McNair, with whom he made his home in San Antonio, survive.

Born at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., April 16, 1878, Col. Potts entered the Army as an enlisted man in the Spanish-American War. He was commissioned in 1900. He was a graduate of the Army War College and served on the War Department general staff for four years. He retired in 1936.

Honorary pallbearers include Brig. Gen. Irving J. Phillipson, Cols. Benjamin M. Bailey, Shepard L. Pike, William V. Carter and Lieut. Cols. Otis K. Sadtler and William F. Lee.

Britain Buys $1,033,700,000 In Reserve Food

London, March 25 (INS).—Jamming her warehouses in a planned campaign of hoarding against the ravages of German U-boats, Britain in the last three months has bought $1,033,700,000 worth of surplus food, it was disclosed tonight.

Britain is arranging for enough to feed the population for six months even if not a single food ship arrives.

Taxpayers Call Meeting Thursday At Rockville

A county-wide mass meeting has been called for Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Rockville (Md.) Courthouse by the Emergency Committee of the Montgomery County Taxpayers Association, W. I. Cleveland, chairman, announced last night.

The mass meeting is called to present taxpayers' views on the budget for the county, Cleveland announced. Speakers will point out definite methods of effecting savings both in the budget itself and items which will require no changes in the budget, he said.

Cleveland said he had conferred with President Thomas Earle Hampton of the Montgomery County commissioners and had invited the commissioners to be present. Hampton yesterday announced he had informed Cleveland that no changes in the county budget can be effected after tomorrow.

Wind, Choppy Sea Halt Distance Swim

Bimini, Bahamas, March 25 (AP).—A rising wind tonight did for Paul Chotteau, Bimini-to-Palm Beach swimmer, what a shark earlier had failed to do—caused him to be taken from the water after covering nearly half of the 71-mile distance.

With the wind kicking up whitecaps and the small dinghy alongside the swimmer shipping water, those in charge decided to take Chotteau aboard the yacht Sea Breeze.

Complaining lustily, the marathon splasher boarded the yacht, after he had been in the water 14 hours 7 minutes and covered approximately 33 miles.

Mink Denies Closed Shop Issue

Jack Mink, business agent of Cafeteria Local 471, C. I. O. affiliate, last night charged that the statement of Harvey L. Cobb, attorney for the Press Cafeteria "is inconsistent with the facts" in connection with the cafeteria's walkout.

Mink declared both white and colored employes are involved in the strike. "That the union insists on a closed shop is absolutely not true," he declared. "The union has offered to renew the old agreement with only economic improvements." He listed the "real issues" of the strike as rights of collective bargaining, a 48-hour week, an increase in pay and paid holidays.

HOW MUCH SHOULD ONE SPEND

. . . for a hotel room in New York?

At The Waldorf-Astoria, the single room at $7 (or the double at $10) is considerably larger than an ordinary hotel room. You enter through a private foyer. The furnishings and decorations are modern in the best sense. The walls are sound proofed. The closet is large and well lighted. And the bath is exceptionally equipped.

Add these facts to the prestige of a world-famous address and you have the true value of a room at the Waldorf.

Community Candidates

Many organizations which do not ordinarily concern themselves with questions of personnel are taking a keen interest in the selection of a successor to George E. Allen whose resignation from the Board of Commissioners becomes effective on April 15. Obviously that interest does not arise from any desire to favor specific individuals. Rather it reflects a "grass-roots" demand for better government in the District.

The urgent need of the moment is some means by which this appeal for an appointment in the community interest can be effectively organized. Regardless of how extensive the interest in this appointment may be, lack of unity would result only in many diverse suggestions that would offer little help to the President in determining the type of man the District wants. In effect, then, this heightened interest throws a greater responsibility upon civic groups to pool their efforts.

It is obvious, moreover, that a small slate of acceptable nominees will win the support of various civic groups which refuse to indorse any individual candidate for a public office. The rule against personal indorsements by organizations of this sort is sound. When a group of highly qualified nominees are chosen to indicate the type of public servants the community prefers, however, an entirely different principle is invoked. In this case support for the slate becomes a disinterested and objective appeal for better municipal government.

There is a disposition on the part of some groups to put forward candidates solely from their own ranks. Requests are being heard for the selection of a representative of labor, of business, of the professions; for a career man and a woman Commissioner. Of course, this interest is commendable, but the approach is unfortunate. The board has only two civilian Commissioners. So only two of the city's numerous economic and civic interests could be represented on it. That simple fact is sufficient to undercut all arguments for representation of any particular group on the board.

In so far as possible the new Commissioner should represent the community as a whole. The best chance Washington has to improve its city government, in the absence of organic changes, is to bring together all civic groups in an effort to suggest to the President a small slate of names that will command community-wide support.

Plugging A Loophole

It would be rash to assume that the current British submarine offensive on German shipping will block or even lead to any serious curtailment in the Third Reich's trade with her Baltic neighbors.

It is quite true that, with the Allied blockade effectively cutting off Germany from the overseas world, any interruption of raw material shipments from nearby neutrals might work a real hardship on her. That would certainly be the case if Germany were somehow prevented from getting continuous and large-scale shipments of Swedish iron ore.

The fact is, however, that within a few weeks the Gulf of Bothnia will be free of ice and fully reopened to navigation. It will then be possible to send Swedish ore, now going via Narvik and Norwegian territorial waters, by the more direct and safer route.

The effect of the British submarine offensive in and near the Baltic is thus likely to be limited and temporary. Its psychological significance at this moment, however, is nonetheless great. It reflects the new and more aggressive mood of the Allies who, far from being overcome by defeatism as a result of the Finnish collapse, are now manifesting an impatience to prosecute the war more vigorously. It belongs, therefore, in the same category as the British air raid on the Sylt and the French cabinet crisis which led to the replacement of Daladier by Reynaud.

There is another aspect of the British submarine campaign which also deserves attention. The entrance to the Baltic is narrow. It is difficult to enter that sea without crossing, at one point or another, Norwegian, Danish or Swedish territorial waters. One might even argue that it is impossible for British submarines to operate as they have done recently in their raids on German shipping, without knowingly or unknowingly violating the neutrality of one or more of those Scandinavian nations.

In fact, Norway has already protested that British warships have twice violated Norwegian territorial waters. In other words, Britain's attempt to plug up the loopholes in the blockade by employing methods against German shipping which Germany has employed against Allied and neutral vessels may mean a further curtailment of neutral rights. Thus the Scandinavian nations find themselves more than ever between two fearful fires.

Taxes Or Contribution

By the emphatic vote of 196 to 106 the House has registered its dislike for a sales tax in Washington. That body even refused to consider the Nichols bill combining a 2 per cent sales tax with a graduated levy on incomes of more than $10,000. There can be little doubt that the Nichols bill has been killed.

Opponents of the sales tax will be delighted by this outcome. There never has been any popular support either in the District or in Congress for an arbitrary levy on sales that would inevitably work a hardship upon families of low incomes. The Nichols bill won adherents chiefly among those who regard the sales tax as the only practical means by which the District's revenue from property taxes can be supplemented.

But the action of the House is by no means an unmitigated advantage to the local community. It means only that the District will likely escape a sales tax this year. Unfortunately, it carried no assurance whatever that the dilemma left at the door of the District Building by the recent Court of Appeals decision in the Sweeney case will be satisfactorily solved.

Assuming that the rebuff given Congressman Nichols means final defeat for his bill, two courses of action are open to the House District Committee. It can propose an amendment to the present income tax law so as to extend that levy to incomes earned in the District by nonresidents. Or, as Mr. Nichols' remarks suggest, it can ask for repeal of the $6,000,000 limitation on the payment which the Federal Government makes to help defray the expenses of the Capital City.

There are many reasons to believe that the income tax could be satisfactorily modified in spite of the Court of Appeals ruling that Washingtonians claiming legal residence in the States are not subject to District domiciliary taxes. Reciprocal arrangements with the States to avoid double taxation might be difficult to work out, but they do not appear to present an insuperable obstacle. And even if such negotiations failed in their purpose, a modified income tax would probably not involve more serious double taxation than the sales tax.

Congressmen may not like the idea of taxing their constituents in the Federal service for the benefit of the Nation's Capital, but Washington must collect revenue from some major source other than real estate. Now that the sales tax bill has been laid aside, the choice very definitely lies between amendment of the income tax to make it workable and enlargement of the Federal payment.

The House District Committee ought to face this situation courageously. If it cannot patch up the income tax satisfactorily, the way will be open for a new drive to enact the Overton bill, giving the District a larger Federal payment.

Britain's Trade Deficit

British authorities are said to have announced their intention to reduce purchases of American cotton as a means of conserving foreign exchange. It is by no means clear why such advance notice should be given at this time, as the British have already bought a good deal more cotton since August 1, the beginning of the marketing season, than they would normally purchase in an entire year.

Some of this cotton was shipped under a barter arrangement between our Government and that of Great Britain. Most of the remaining shipments were facilitated by an export subsidy. Since export subsidies are no longer being paid, and British requirements have probably been met, it is to be expected that export buying will be sharply curtailed for the rest of the marketing year.

During the coming year, the volume of our cotton exports will be influenced by a number of factors unconnected with the war. For instance, Great Britain's purchases of American cotton, like those of other countries, will depend not only upon the extent of need, but also upon the extent to which American export subsidies reduce the cost of our cotton to foreigner buyers. Unless that cost is kept low enough to enable American cotton to compete with foreign growths our export trade will probably suffer a severe slump next year, war or no war.

However, there is no question that the necessity of conserving her limited foreign exchange resources will incline Great Britain to restrict purchases of American cotton to a minimum. She will be disposed to take a larger amount of cotton grown within the empire or possibly in Brazil, where a larger market may be gained for British exports by increased cotton purchases.

Recently published figures of Britain's foreign trade for the first two months of the year show how essential it is for the British to increase exports and keep imports at the lowest figure compatible with the requirements of a wartime economy.

The adverse merchandise trade balance for January and February amounted to the huge sum of £116,000,000. During the first six months of the war, imports exceeded exports by £261,000,000—an increase of 51 per cent over the total for the corresponding period a year ago. Exports in February remained slightly below the level of the preceding year, while imports had risen over 46 per cent.

In the face of this record, the United States can scarcely consider it an unfriendly or discriminatory act if Great Britain shifts her buying of cotton or other essential commodities to countries that do not drain away her cash reserves.

Off The Reservation

It is rather startling for an Administration supporter like Senator Pittman to admit publicly that a "high protectionist Republican" may triumph at the polls next November, and take up residence in the White House. But there is method in the seeming rashness of the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. By invoking the specter of a Republican President who might increase tariff rates as much as 50 per cent under the trade-agreements program Mr. Pittman has found a new argument for Senate ratification of such agreements.

It is really a very adroit argument, enabling Mr. Pittman to pose as a champion of the Hull plan, while advocating an amendment that Mr. Hull's supporters bitterly oppose. Indeed, they insist that acceptance of the ratification proposal would sabotage the program. Since Senator Pittman represents a State where the cattle industry is important, there is more than a suspicion that his approval in principle of the Hull policies is not unqualified.

The purpose of the Trade Agreements Act is to expand foreign markets by lowering trade barriers, as stated in the text of the law. While duties could be increased by the President, few nations would be willing to enter into negotiations if faced by a prospect of higher duties. A limited number of schedules might be increased in negotiating a pact, provided offsetting concessions were made. But if such increases were applied to countries with which agreements had already been concluded, aggrieved nations would soon find excuses for abrogating them.

In other words, any extensive or important advances in tariff rates under reciprocal agreements would tend to wreck the entire program.

Nobody knows better than Senator Pittman the long delays that often arise when international agreements have to await the pleasure of Senators. He himself has had tucked away for several years the draft of the controversial sanitary convention, so greatly desired by Argentina. And no hearings have been held as yet on that proposal. If trade agreements were subjected to similar dilatory treatment, there would be little use going to the trouble of negotiating them.

The Sane Hatter

Mrs. Roosevelt was recently quoted as saying she thought Fiorello LaGuardia "could do almost anything he wants" even to making good if he were elected Vice President. But apparently New York's fighting little mayor is encountering difficulties in one of the many fields he has invaded. He may be a good conductor, a better fire fighter and an excellent mayor, but as a fashion expert he received what amounted to a collective bird from the women of his city.

In a speech to a fashion group, the mayor observed that hats weren't so good." He suggested they ought to be more practical and "New Yorkese." He further vented much of his wrath with feminine headgear on Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of the Social Securities Board, who sat at the speakers' table, by plucking lilies of the valley off her white Easter fedora as he spoke. "Whoever designed that hat," the mayor said, "knew nothing of the principles of aerodynamics or he would have known that anything tilted like that must go down."

Most of the women interviewed on the mayor's sartorial ideas, advised the Little Flower in no uncertain terms to stick to politics. One milliner exclaimed, "I was so thrilled that he even knew women wore hats." Even his friend and admirer, Mrs. Roosevelt, admitted that her spring bonnet is adorned with a phial filled with water to hold a fresh gardenia.

After witnessing some of the hats in this year's Easter parade, especially one creation which included a music box, we are not at all sure that we do not side with Mr. LaGuardia in this latest scrap. If he successfully exerts his influence for improvement of feminine headgear, the mayor may well add yet another feather to his already heavily adorned black sombrero.

"I question the morality of a young woman who dyes her hair," asserts a minister. Evidently he thinks the bad dye young.

The man who says the country is going to the dogs must be trying to make himself eligible to receive his share of it—he growls all the time.

That's Sure A Pretty Hat!

"Abolish The Census"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The old saying, "Ask me no questions, and I will tell you no lies," implies that people will and do lie, when they are asked impertinent, personal, intimate prying questions.

Apply this to the census. Millions of people will consider some question or other of the census too personal to answer. They will either commit the sin of downright lying—a sin for which the Government is partly responsible by furnishing the occasion—or they will give evasive, qualified, misleading answers, and try to clear their consciences by making mental reservations. Such false answers will, of course, entirely destroy the value of the census, and falsify the statistics based upon such answers.

The people know that the Government will not be able to check up on false answers to the census. Nor will fear of prosecution deter them from giving false answers, for they know that hardly anyone in the whole history of census taking has been prosecuted for disobeying census regulations.

The census will do more harm than good. It is a tyrannical institution, and ought to be abolished.

Mr. Cromwell's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think Mr. Cromwell is to be congratulated on his straight-forward talk of March 19. I agree wholeheartedly with his remarks and cannot understand the storm of protest that has arisen in Washington over the matter.

There is nothing whatsoever dangerous in Mr. Cromwell's speech—he merely reiterated factual statements. His was not a speech toward war but a mere recounting of history, with an eye toward the future. God forbid that the day has come when an official representative of the American Government cannot utter the truth publicly.

Mr. Cromwell said that Germany "seeks to destroy institutions and the social and economic order upon which the Government of this nation is founded." Is this a lie? It is the plain, unvarnished truth and every sensible American citizen knows it.

It is said that Mr. Cromwell's speech was not that of a neutral country's representative. If that is true, America has declined into a state of indifference to affairs that will vitally affect them in the very near future—a state of mind that is far more dangerous than if every official representative of the United States was verbally attacking Germany and Russia with regularity. If we are afraid to express our sentiments and attitudes publicly, we cannot hold our heads high as the world's leading champion of democracy. WAYNE W. FISHER.

Miss Gibbon's Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial concerning my experience at the George Washington University is a glib and persuasive piece of writing. And it is, purposely perhaps, quite misleading.

You are probably entirely right in ignoring Dr. Marvin's verbal assurances that I need not get the Ph. D., and that it would not stand in the way of my progress. But you should, in all fairness, have pointed out that our faculty code states no such formal technical requirement for promotion and tenure, and that other faculty members have been given promotion and tenure without it.

You warn—again quite correctly—against a situation in which teachers and their students are to decide upon matters of promotion unaided. But you ignore the fact, for which I have written evidence, that my promotion was requested by responsible administrative officers.

Your rather outworn metaphor about the tempest in the teapot requires analysis. There is never a tempest in the teapot, you know, when the tea is brewing properly. The American Association of University Professors can tell you that my case is only one in a series of such cases under Dr. Marvin's regime at George Washington.

The faculty do not dare to speak out, for their livelihoods and careers are dependent upon Dr. Marvin's favor. It is rather ironic, perhaps, that men and women who teach young people the greatest thoughts of all mankind are incapable themselves of rising above the cowardly concern for self-preservation which their brute instincts alone would provide.

Yet in a properly conducted investigation, where these men and women were safeguarded against Dr. Marvin's use of power over them, they would speak out, I believe in surprising numbers, and they would speak some surprising truths about the academic life at the George Washington University under what you describe as the "vigorous and progressive leadership" of Dr. Marvin.

'Of Freedom'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The trouble is we "know so much that ain't so."

We could make much more progress discussing things if we were agreed upon the meaning of words. But even when we go to the lexicon for definitions our concepts of the significance of a term must vary according to our experiences. And prejudices inhibit our rationalization.

A whole column on the editorial page of a recent issue of The Post was given to material excerpted from Msgr. Sheen's recent book. The title of the work is "Freedom Under God."

"Our liberal freedom has created monstrous economic injustices . . ." At this stage of my apotheosis such a statement does not present a mental concept clear and harmonious. If it were "lack of liberal freedom" I should feel that I understood.

". . . liberals flatter themselves that they are preserving liberty because they give greater satisfaction to material appetites." Would it be more praiseworthy to give less satisfaction? Should we revoke the old "pursuit of happiness" gag of the founding fathers. I wonder if I understand!

Surely a querulous reference to excerpts from such a book may be made in an independent American newspaper in 1940. The quotations should be representative of the dominant thesis since they are selected and printed under the name of the author.

The Budget And Unemployment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The auditors' reports covering the operations of a number of large corporations, in comparison with previous years, disclose that 1939 was the best year from the standpoint of both turnover and earnings. In fact the financial pages of the daily paper have been a source of much comfort to me lately, contrasting sharply with the domestic, political and foreign news.

Nevertheless, those reports fail to mention whether more men and women were added to the pay rolls or not. According to unofficial estimates there are between nine and ten million unemployed employable people, including relief clients. After the census has been taken we may know the exact figure, but it will matter little to the jobless themselves.

From the Republicans aspiring to turn this country into the promised land again, pronouncements are heard that do not square with the factual state of affairs alluded to, viz., better business and millions unemployed. From the Democrats, in the absence of definite proposals, come indications that they are satisfied with the existing situation. The former, however, are harping loudly on a theme they believe will bring about the desired results: balance the budget! The latter seem to realize that as a campaign issue balancing the budget is a negative good.

Mr. Morgenthau is quoted as saying: "It wouldn't worry me in the least to see the debt limit raised to 46 or 47 billions, or to even 50 billions." With due respect for the Secretary of the Treasury's airy words, the solvency of the United States Government cannot be maintained indefinitely on such a basis.

Economic laws are just as immutable as natural laws, and while it may be possible to transgress them for the sake of expediency, sooner or later reaction asserts itself. America is the world's leading creditor nation today, but paradoxically our country is saddled with a huge internal debt which Mr. Morgenthau has no scruples about inflating still higher.

Can it be that defects in the tax structure have contributed to unbalance the budget to a very certain degree? If many corporations are now making more money than ever before in their history, why should they not pay a larger proportion of the Government's expenditures?

This reasoning should not appear fallacious because it might get us somewhere in solving the unemployment problem; its effect would tend to stabilize the rate of growth of big business and at the same time enable small business to expand, creating new jobs.

It is logical to assume that when any enterprise reaches a given point in its development, further expansion is not necessarily predicated upon employing more labor—more machinery is set up. But the small entrepreneur will have to employ more labor directly, rather than invest in equipment for which his plant is not yet ready.

The Post Impressionist

Admission Ten Cents

I ride the bus. I like riding the bus. Because everyone else rides the bus, and I like being where everyone else is. There are more people to be found per cubic inch of bus space than anywhere else on earth except at White House receptions. (It is generally agreed that having free food there gives them a two-goal handicap.

Receptions are monotonous, anyway. That's why I like the bus. Because it isn't monotonous. I used to buy a paper and try to improve myself by reading something on the way here and there, but I stopped that long ago, and took to dropping the pennies in my penny bank instead. Now I go along just for the ride.

Riding the bus is something you have to develop a taste for, like seven-day bicycle racing. At first the whole thing strikes you as a lot of hopeless confusion and heat and display of brute strength. But pretty soon you get the hang of it. You learn how to climb over umbrellas, babies and "cash and carry" household fixtures, get a death grip on the nearest unoccupied inch of the horizontal bar, assume a spread-eagle stance with your legs and a keep-off-my-feet-if-you-know-what-is-good-for-you expression behind your soft brown eyes.

Once situated you are able to turn all your attention to your fellow passengers. This, after all, is the main purpose in riding the bus in the first place. You will probably see several people you know, several people whom you would like to know, and still other people whom you will get to know, whether you like it or not, before you get home. You will rub shoulders with Senator Blank, while reading a bit of Congressman Biff's newspaper, at the same time being elbowed in the ribs by one of the Government girls who is fuming to get home and do her hair up in tin curlers before it is time for dinner at her boarding house.

You will hear more sound philosophy dished up over a potted petunia than over many an embassy teacup, hear stories every day that will top anything you've ever read in the Saturday Evening Post; muscle in on bits of gossip that Winchell could be proud of; see people whom Bea Lillie would break a leg trying to mimic and Peggy Bacon couldn't caricature in a month of Quinquagesima Sundays, and hear more theories for keeping the country out of war than Mrs. Roosevelt ever dreamed of after a Hyde Park weenie roast.

Riding the bus is no Sunday school picnic. It takes a mighty right arm and a sprained sense of humor. It's no place for old ladies, bustles or ice cream. If you're the sensitive type, you'd better half a cab. But if, as I do, you believe that "folks are more fun than anybody," especially the queer ones, then scorn the private car and ride the bus. Because we are all queer. Some of us are just queerer than others. And almost any day you may have the good fortune to tune in on as choice a bit of monologue as I overheard a couple of Mondays ago.

She was one of the Government girls, plump and 40, wearing a flowered print dress and a fearful, but wonderful, hat of orchid straw from which hung 4 feet of orchid veiling. Around the crown of the hat marched a procession of small yellow birds, about ten in all, and with the addition of a handle the creation would have made a superb Easter basket.

I stared at the advertising card just above me, the one about getting a nail brush, a pair of scissors and a Murphy bed or something all for the price of one, while the lady with the birds unburdened herself (across my chest) to her friend on the other side of me.

"'Lissen," she hissed furiously, "do you know what he had the nerve to tell me? Honest, you won't believe it, but he told me that my efficiency rating was low! Can you imagine the nerve? That's what burns me up about these Government jobs. Me working for a man like that, and him having the brass to mention my efficiency. I know what's eatin' on him. He's jealous. He probably never got beyond the fourth grade, and it burns him up every time he thinks about me going to college."

"I guess every time he looks at me he thinks of all the advantages I have over him in education and culture, and it burns him up. That's the trouble with guys like that. Lissen, honey, I could run that office with one hand tied behind my back and him home sick in bed with a milk leg. But just let me ask for a raise and he pulls that stuff about efficiency rating.

"I just mentioned it to Miss What's-her-name—you know, that dumb snip of a blonde in the office. Well, when I told her, what do you think she said? Said I must have used the wrong technique. Said it was easy to get a raise in that office. All you had to do was to use your influence,' if you know what I mean.

"Well, believe me, I told her plenty, I said, believe me, before I let any young smarty like him take advantage of his position over me when I've got principles and all sorts of education and culture, I'd quit first. If he thinks I'm going to use my 'influence' he's got another think coming. With all my background. I got ideals!

"And would you believe it, she said the girls were supposed to file their addresses and telephone numbers with the office in case they would be wanted for any special work in the evenings. Lissen, honey, I wasn't born yesterday, and I said to her I think that's the most disgustin' thing I ever heard of. A girl's private life is her own. Imagine leaving your phone number so they could call you up nights. Believe me, I'm not leaving my phone number in anybody's office. A girl has to have some privacy. Besides I got ideals!

"Of course, if I wanted to I could get that raise. You know, being coy around the office and all that sort of thing, but if he thinks I'm that kind of a girl he's crazy. Of course, with some girls that's the only way they know to get a raise. To make a good impression on the men. But not me! Not with my background!"

Scalise And Bioff

By William Green,
President, American Federation of Labor

II. The Cases Examined

(This is the second of three articles by Mr. Green taking issue with charges made by Westbrook Pegler. The third and last will appear in this space tomorrow.)

THERE is just as much truth to the charge that the American Federation of Labor is a racketeering organization preying upon the workers of the country as there is to Adolf Hitler's charge that democracy is a device by which racketeering politicians prey upon the people.

Would it be fair to condemn American democracy because of a Teapot Dome scandal and the disclosure that even a Cabinet officer has been corrupt?

Would you lose faith in the courts and American justice because the senior judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals is now serving a jail term for betraying his trust?

Would you lose confidence in the Federal Reserve System and start hoarding your savings under a mattress because a number of prominent bankers have been sentenced to prison for crookedness?

Would you condemn the police system of an entire city because an individual member of the force is exposed as a bribe taker?

Would you reject the capitalistic system and join the Communist Party because certain corporation officials have run off with the stockholders' money?

WELL, THEN, there is just as much sense in Westbrook Pegler's attack upon the American Federation of Labor because he has found two union officials with criminal records.

The two men named by Mr. Pegler are Willie Bioff and George Scalise.

I have never met Mr. Bioff nor spoken to him. He is an appointed representative of his union. The facts in his case are that he has been associated with the union movement only five or six years. The crime for which he was convicted in Chicago took place many years before that and had nothing to do with his subsequent union activities. He is now charged with having evaded his sentence and the case is before the courts. It is up to the officers and members of the union by which Mr. Bioff is employed to decide whether they wish to be represented by a man of his character. My personal views in the matter are well known to the officers of this particular union. However, Mr. Bioff is not responsible to me but to them. And the elected officers of the union are responsible to the members of the union. If the officers and members of the union are dissatisfied with Mr. Bioff, the union's constitution provides the means of getting rid of him. If the officers and members of the union feel that Mr. Bioff's record is a good one and that he should be retained, they have the right to stick by him. The American Federation of Labor itself cannot intervene in such cases and I will explain why in the next article.

NOW AS TO Mr. Scalise. I have known Mr. Scalise during the two years he has been president of the Building Service Employes Union. It appears that Mr. Scalise at the age of 17 was convicted of a crime. He served his sentence in Atlanta Penitentiary. When this fact was published by Mr. Pegler after a lapse of 25 years, Mr. Scalise came to me and told me his story.

He said that ever since he got out of jail he had gone straight. He submitted a detailed record of his life to prove that assertion. It showed he had worked steadily at various jobs, in an automobile plant, for an insurance company and as a chauffeur. He became active in a local teamsters' union in Brooklyn and later accepted a job as organizer for the Building Service Employes Union, which promoted him to higher positions until he became president in 1937.

Mr. Scalise said he had married and had a daughter and that the first knowledge his wife and daughter received of his criminal record was when they read it in cold print in Mr. Pegler's column. He said he lives with his wife and daughter and his parents in a cottage in Brooklyn.

FURTHERMORE, Mr. Scalise charged that certain local officials of his union whom he had exposed for alleged misappropriation of funds were responsible for reviving and spreading by anonymous circulars the early chapter of his life. Mr. Scalise made the point that if he were himself a racketeer he certainly would not be active in extirpating racketeering in his union.

If Mr. Scalise's story is true—and I have no reason to doubt it—surely Mr. Pegler rendered no public service in exposing the sordid story of his past. As I understand the theory of penology and the principles of decency, the object of punishment is to make the culprit see the error of crime and mend his ways. If a man commits a crime, pays the penalty and then goes straight, is he to be penalized for his past for the rest of his life?

The American Federation of Labor's membership is made up of human beings. They are subject to human frailties. They cannot all be perfect. But during its 60 years of existence dishonesty has been the rare exception rather than the rule in the American Federation of Labor and I think that Mr. Pegler has unconsciously helped to prove this.

Charges made against him and George Scalise are discussed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his article on this page today

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Through a Child's Eyes

PATSY ZIEMER is 12 years old and the author of "Two Thousand and Ten Days of Hitler" (Harper, $2.75). How much her father, who was head of the American School in Berlin until last summer, may have helped her I do not know; he confesses to authorship of supplementary observations which make up more than a quarter of the book, and I suspect that he may have prompted his child's memory more than that. It does not matter; the essence of the book is an obviously genuine picture of Germany as it appeared to an American school child.

PATSY'S daddy spoke German (his great-grandfather had emigrated from Germany to Buffalo a century ago), he was Aryan, and he had an American passport. Sometimes that was a protection; it enabled him, for instance, to take his classes (after warning the German students to speak only English) to visit German official institutions. Sometimes it inspired fear, sometimes friendship. Once, when he was being questioned at the office of the criminal police on the Kaiserdamm, two inspectors questioned him closely, then looked at each other cautiously, then asked if he knew the officials at the American Consulate General.

He knew them all. They hemmed and hawed, then asked, in low tones, if they might call on him in private some evening at the American school. They had Jewish friends, they explained, who had been arrested, forced to sign over their businesses, and granted a week to leave the country, and they thought the Americans might help. They did. One of their friends got to England, another to the Philippines. The Ziemers have today, as one of their most cherished possessions, a silver bowl, given to them as a token of gratitude by the Berlin Kriminal Polizei, for helping Jews get out of Germany.

OTHERS DID not get away. On Monday after the "Day of Breaking Glass," Patsy says, Heinz F., who commuted from Brandenburg, came late and looked pale. His mother was a practicing physician who had been married to a Jew; the Ziemers had been trying for months to arrange for her and Heinz to get out of their native land. Heinz looked pale that morning.

"Did something go wrong in Brandenburg, too?" the Ziemers asked.

"They arrested my mother Friday night," he said. "She took poison in prison; they sent us the ashes yesterday."

When the Ziemers really wanted to talk freely, they got out their car and went for a ride. It was the only place where they felt sure no one was listening.

One day the postman brought a letter from a friend in Fergus Falls, Minn., with a slogan stamped on it, to advertise Minnesota dairy products: "Eat more butter." The postal authorities were suspicious: they thought some one in America was making fun of Germany. It was hard for them to believe that there was a country which had more butter than it knew how to use.

Daddy Zeimer lists the taxes he had to pay; Patsy lists the things she knew to be verboten in Germany. Between them, they give an excellent picture of life in German schools and in German camps, and they quote several of the blood-curdling songs being taught patriotic German youth. Patsy remembers also the nice pine-bough beds in the German Youth camps.

A day came when Daddy Ziemer knew that his American school was no longer possible in Berlin. The school closed; endless formalities were complied with. They got, with difficulty, the final Unbedenklichkeitsbescheinigung—if Patsy spelled that without help, she is good—stamped by Nazi officials to indicate that there was no party objection to the Americans' departing; they crossed the ocean to a strange country, America.

Not many American children can know as well as Patsy does why she likes America. Patsy explains—because here they have ice cream, they give away matches free, nobody seems to worry about being arrested, you can have eggs for breakfast, the streets are full of cars, everybody's in a hurry, nothing seems to be verboten, and at school, when boy meets girl, the girls don't curtsy and say "Heil Hitler!" and the boys don't click their heels and shout "Heil Roosevelt." They just say "Hi," and grin.

Canada Votes

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

Today's Election In The Dominion

Ottawa.

THE GENERAL election campaign in Canada has now drawn to a close with polling taking place throughout the Dominion today. Actually a substantial number of votes have already been cast. The members of the Canadian armed forces on service either at home or in Europe have for the past week been marking their ballots under a special system of voting, and last Friday certain classes of civilian voters unable by reason of their occupations to be at home on polling day were allowed to vote in advance.

It was only in the closing week of the campaign that public interest became keenly aroused. A vote of average dimensions is expected, as the farmers have not resumed outdoor work. Unless the country roads are blocked by a late blizzard they will turn out to vote more freely than at an election in the summer or fall. But the country at large will be heartily glad to put behind it a campaign which the Toronto Globe and Mail declares to be the most unsatisfactory contest within memory and see an end of the torrents of oratory and propaganda which have been poured forth.

A VARIETY of factors have been operating to upset the calculations of the Liberals that they would easily secure another large majority. Their efforts to restrict the issue of the campaign to the sole question as to which party offered the best prospect of preserving national unity and insuring a vigorous and efficient war effort on the part of Canada have not been successful. The National Government Party and the two leftist groups have succeeded in injecting the domestic issues into the campaign and a government which has been nearly five years in office has always a lot of sins to answer for.

There has been dissatisfaction in the cities about unemployment relief. There are grievances in the farming communities about the government's wheat marketing policy, the workings of the bacon agreement concluded with the British government and other matters and there are local sources of discontent in a number of constituencies. The opposition has been exploiting these grievances and the ministerial cause has suffered by their discussion, especially as Premier King and other Liberal leaders have taken the line that all other issues except the winning of victory are irrelevant in this campaign and should not be discussed.

Again, it is now admitted by many Liberals that the summary dissolution of Parliament three hours after it met last January was a tactical error because it has forced the government into a defensive role throughout the campaign. Liberal ministers and candidates have had to devote a great deal of time and energy to answering charges, which could have been met more effectively and directly on the floor of Parliament. They have also had to encounter the suspicion that they must have had some grave misdemeanors to hide, when they locked up Parliament in sudden haste and thereby prevented the opposition from calling for official files and returns.

As a result, the opposition has felt free to make most extravagant charges about patronage and mismanagement and, although the ministerialists make out the best possible defense, it does not always secure credence. It has also been very unfortunate for the government that the private secretary of Mr. Norman Rogers, the minister of national defense, who, after the outbreak of war, was transferred to this department to quiet popular clamor against the administration of his predecessor, Mr. Ian Mackenzie, has within the past week been revealed to be interested in a lumber firm which has been given a number of war contracts. Mr. Rogers has worsened the situation for himself by defending his secretary. As a result, he has become the target of vitriolic attacks by the opposition and is in grave danger of losing his seat, Kingston, Ontario, which is traditionally Conservative.

THEN IT appears that the Liberals have irritated a considerable body of the voters by taking the line that their leaders have a virtual monopoly of wisdom and statesmanship and alone are capable of providing the country with an efficient war government. Their opponents have been pointing out that in Britain, France, Australia and South Africa no party has persisted in advancing this claim and coalition ministries are running the war.

Furthermore, not a few voters having come to the conclusion that the King ministry cannot possibly be defeated, feel that since their war program had been marred by various errors and derelictions of duty, it is imperative that they should not be given as large a majority as in the last Parliament, but should be kept up to the mark by a strong and vigilant opposition.

For these reasons many voters of an independent turn of mind, who, at the opening of the campaign were ready to support the government, now think that a vote against them would be in the best interests of the war effort.

But it is still hard to see how the government can be beaten as long as it retains its ascendance in the Province of Quebec where it held 60 out of 65 seats in the last Parliament and the opposition is not able to offer any convincing evidence that it has made any great headway with the French-Canadian voters. It is true that Dr. Manion had surprisingly large and enthusiastic meetings both in Montreal and Quebec and that his ability to speak in the French tongue and to present a French-Canadian wife upon his platform were great assets during his tour of Quebec. It is equally true that his party has been exploiting with some success the issue of the St. Lawrence Waterway in Montreal, where this project is very unpopular.

On the other hand, he has had to contend with the French-Canadian ingrained hostility to military conscription and his cause has not been helped by the declaration of the Hon. Sam Gobeil, a member of the last Conservative ministry, that conscription would probably be necessary before victory was won and that while Mr. King and Dr. Manion had the right to oppose it, their opposition was not logical. The Liberals have been making the most of the conscription issue and recalling how the Coalition ministry of Sir Robert Borden, which Dr. Manion supported in his first session at Ottawa imposed military conscription and branded Quebec as a disloyal community because the French-Canadian population solidly opposed.

THE EPISODE burnt deep into the minds of the French-Canadians and the Liberals are confident that they will take no chances about helping to elect a government dominated by Conservatives. However, Dr. Manion's supporters are now claiming that they will gain at least 10 seats in Quebec to bring their total up to 15 out of 65 and under the circumstances this would be a considerable feat.

The two Leftist groups, the C. C. F. and the Social Credit Party, are not a serious factor in the contest, except in the western provinces but in these regions cognizance has to be taken of their strength, and it might be possible that between them they would return enough members to hold a balance of power, if there was no large margin between the two old parties.

Last week some index of western sentiment was secured through a provincial election held in the Province of Alberta at which the Social Credit ministry of the redoubtable Premier Aberhart tried for a fresh mandate. The results thus far available are inconclusive because a system of proportional representation is in operation in the province and if no one candidate obtains a clear majority on the first count of votes through first preferences, then the votes of the one or more candidates trailing on the first have to be allocated according to their later preferences.

The indications are that the Aberhart ministry should scrape through by a very close margin. However, it is plain that the Social Credit Party, while it has lost some of its original support, has still a large following in Alberta, and if a combination of the old parties cannot beat it in a provincial election, its federal candidates who are running as United Democrats under the banner of Mr. Herridge are likely to hold most of their seats in the federal election when the nominees of the two old parties will be fighting one another.

The C. C. F. made a very poor showing in Alberta and it is reported to have lost a lot of support in British Columbia on account of its policy of limited participation in the war, but to offset the losses which it suffered in that province, it may gain some seats in Saskatchewan. But the quarrel between the two Leftist groups will help the Liberals in the West to retain seats which they would otherwise have lost.

Party Chairman

By Bertram Benedict

Mr. Farley And Others

NOW THAT Postmaster General Farley has come out unqualifiedly for the Presidential nomination, the question arises of whether he ought not to resign as chairman of the National Democratic Committee. The party chairman by tradition is supposed to be neutral toward aspirations for the nomination.

JAMES Aloysius Farley has held the post of national chairman longer than any other man in modern American history except Marcus Alonzo Hanna. And he has enjoyed greater political power than any other national party chairman with the exception of Hanna and possibly Will H. Hays.

Hanna, wealthy Ohio manufacturer who developed a flair for politics late in life, was primarily responsible for the nomination of McKinley in 1896, just as Farley was the chief factor in the nomination of F. D. Roosevelt in 1932. The personal and political relations between McKinley and Hanna were as intimate as those between F. D. Roosevelt and Farley in Roosevelt's first term.

When McKinley died, predictions were rife that Hanna would break with his successor, the strong willed Theodore Roosevelt, but the two got along famously. Hanna is reported to have remarked: "I like the little feller; he works hard and knows how to handle people." Hanna was Republican national chairman from 1896 until his death in 1904.

THEN George B. Cortelyou resigned as Secretary of Commerce and Labor to head the Republican National Committee. He remained chairman after he went back into the Cabinet as Postmaster General, following the 1904 elections, but gave up the chairmanship when he was named Secretary of the Treasury in 1907.

William M. Butler, picked in 1924 by President Coolidge for Republican national chairman, had had, like Hanna, no previous experience in public life. Like Hanna, he served in the Senate while head of the party.

William F. McCombs, who had managed Wilson's nomination campaign, became in 1912 Democratic national chairman, but soon broke with the President. He was a political figurehead until his resignation in 1916. Cordell Hull served as Democratic national chairman from 1921 to 1924. John J. Raskob was Alfred E. Smith's personal choice in 1928; he was shelved in favor of Farley when Roosevelt was nominated in 1932.

EARLY in his Administration, in January, 1934, President Roosevelt declared at a press conference that it was incompatible with the spirit of his Administration for any one holding high party office to practice law before Government departments. Later he expanded that position to include disapproval of Government officials being members of a national party committee. Still later he said that if any national committeemen were involved in bidding on Government contracts, they should resign their political posts.

In consequence, some important Democratic officials resigned their political positions, but others in the same status held on. On March 15, 1934, Postmaster General Farley announced that he would retire as New York State Democratic chairman in the following September, and as national Democratic chairman as soon as the President found some one to succeed him. But he still holds both posts.

The Elusive Truth

By Mark Sullivan

Unemployment Statistics

THIS CONTINUING commotion about the number of unemployed is more than a flurry. It goes deep. It will throw light upon the very heart of our national politics—if the reasons for the heat are understood.

The commotion was started by Columnist Dorothy Thompson, who claimed that the total of unemployed is only about 2,000,000, instead of 9,000,000 or more, which is the figure commonly used. Miss Thompson merely presented facts and figures and logic. She did not assign any political reason for the widespread existence of exaggerated estimates of the unemployed. However, another commentator, Mr. Arthur Krock—possibly more familiar than Miss Thompson with the ways of politicians, including New Deal ones—suggested a reason. He says: "The wonder is whether both the Administration and its political opponents are not aware that unemployment is probably millions below the number usually assigned, and are ignoring the fact."

THE WHOLE field, from every point of view, is one of estimates rather than proof. There are strange statistical quirks in it. The term "unemployed" admits different definitions. If a man has a job and his wife keeps house for him, is the wife "unemployed?" No. But if the man loses his job, and if thereupon both man and wife seek jobs, then both will be considered unemployed. Thus the loss of one job may give rise to two cases of unemployment. Conversely, one man getting a job may take two off the list of unemployed. Again, if a portrait painter can't get a job painting portraits, and prefers not to take one painting houses, is he unemployed?

Whenever definitions and standards are inexact, whenever figures can only be estimated, whenever there must be some guesswork—it follows that different estimates are given by different persons and groups. A frequent element in the difference is likely to be bias, conscious or unconscious. It becomes a case of believing what we wish to believe, or what it is our interest to believe. With this clue, consider the motives, often unconscious, of three groups.

THE REGULAR Democrats would like very well to believe what Miss Thompson says, that unemployment today is no greater than in 1929. That would enable them to point with pride—they could claim that the Democratic Administration has brought the country out of depression. The regular Democrats, accustomed to older American politics, would like nothing better than to boast of recovery.

But in this Democratic Administration, the regular Democrats cut little figure. They do not make the policies. It is the New Dealers who do that. The regular Democrats are quite swamped by the greater nearness of the New Dealers to Mr. Roosevelt; by the New Dealers' greater determination and resourcefulness; by their possession of most of the Government agencies; by their command of the flood of publicity that goes out of Washington, about every aspect of government, including unemployment.

And on unemployment, most of the New Dealers have a fixed position. Unemployment is large—large now, and likely to exist always. Passionately they assert it and reassert it. Unemployment is a permanent condition—that is the New Dealers' story, and they're going to stick to it. When Miss Thompson's estimate of 2,000,000 came out, the New Dealers swarmed out at her as angrily as hornets from a nest into which a boy has poked a stick.

WHY THIS NEW DEAL attitude? To be accurate we must see the New Dealers as including a wide gamut of views. Some are mere reformers, whose aims go no farther than reform of the American economic system. These would like the system to recover. But other New Dealers believe in variations of a different system, collectivism.

Persons who believe in collectivism base their belief on one main assertion. They hold that the present American system—called by them "capitalism,"—cannot give employment to all, neither now or in the future. Large unemployment, or assertion that it is large, is the collectivists' stock in trade.

Any statement that unemployment has gone down to normal, or will go down in future, is a statement that the existing American system is a success, or can be. And that, the more radical New Dealers cannot admit. Admit that, and their reason for existence disappears. If this country achieved full business activity, with full employment, the New Dealers would fade away to the status of the Populists of 50 years ago.

There is a third group, the Republicans. Oddly, they, for the moment, prefer to see large estimates of unemployment. They accept the opportunity which the New Dealers give them. The Republicans, thinking in terms of older politics, like to be able to say the Roosevelt Administration has not cured the depression.

Meanwhile, truth has a tough time.

Toys For Grown-Ups

("Provision for grown-ups has been made in the playground areas at Jones Beach Park, Long Island, N. Y. Six kiddie cars, 4 swings, 25 pairs of stilts, 10 pogo sticks, 3 tricycles and 5 rocking boats will be at the disposal of adults this season."—News item.)

Elmer Twitchell today applauded the above as a long-awaited break for grown-ups, and called on park commissions all over America to give the adults a break. "Grown-ups have never seemed more restless, and exasperating," declared Mr. Twitchell. "Kiddie cars may be just the solution."

"It has been as plain as the nose on your face that something is all wrong with us adults," argued Elmer. "Who's causing all the trouble in this world today? Who's responsible for the crazy mess? Children? Certainly, not. It's all the work of the people old enough to know better. They have lacked something to give them poise, balance, self-control, patience and common sense. Maybe it's been pogo sticks and scooters."

Mr. Twitchell wrote a letter to Chester R. Blakelock, executive secretary of the Long Island State Park Commission, which, in a way, is a letter to park commissions everywhere. It follows:

Dear Mr. Blakelock:

There is no doubt that if we could get the grown-ups of this particular planet on pogo sticks and stilts it would do them a lot of good, knock the pompousness out of them and maybe make 'em forget all about land snatching, treaty busting, new economic systems, super planning, etc.

How long would guys like Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini remain so blustery and warlike if we could get 'em into scooters and rocking boats an hour or two every day? How long do you suppose Chamberlain and Adolf could remain so sore at each other if they ever get onto a park seesaw together?

Put President Roosevelt, John Hamilton, Senator Tobey, Bob Wagner, Tom Girdler, Secretary Ickes, Wendell Willkie, Al Smith, Tommy the Cork, Harry Hopkins, Nicholas Murray Butler, Tom Dewey and Jim Farley all on pogo sticks and there would be harmony, horse sense and some fairly intelligent action in no time. Even Johnny Lewis and Bill Green would come out arm and arm after an afternoon on tricycles. Yours sincerely, ELMER TWITCHELL.

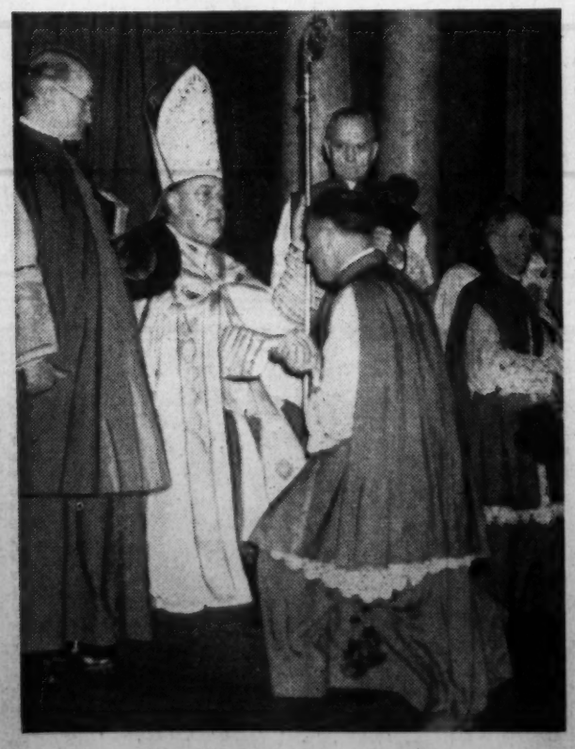
Archbishop of Washington Is Enthroned

1. ENTERING ST. MATTHEW'S—Attended by the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Riordan, pastor, St. Martin's, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor, Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, Archbishop Curley followed a procession of altar boys and monsignori into St. Matthew's, hereafter to be known as the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle. (Page of pictures by Harry Goodwin.)

2. READING THE PAPAL BULLS—Shortly after Archbishop Curley's entrance, the Right Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, pastor, Church of the Immaculate Conception, who was notary at the ceremonies, read the papal bulls,

3. THE SETTING IN ST. MATTHEW'S was reminiscent of medieval times. Archbishop Curley is shown on his faldstool listening to Dr. Cartwright read the Papal Bulls making him head the the youngest archdiocese in America and retaining him as head of the oldest (Baltimore). The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate, is on the throne at left, flanked by his two chaplains, the Right Rev. Msgr. Eugene Connelly, pastor, St. Peter's, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Harry Quinn, of Baltimore



4. ENTHRONED by the Papal delegate, who led him to the throne and presented the Crozier (Shepherd's Crook), Archbishop Curley received obeisance from the Washington clergy in attendance

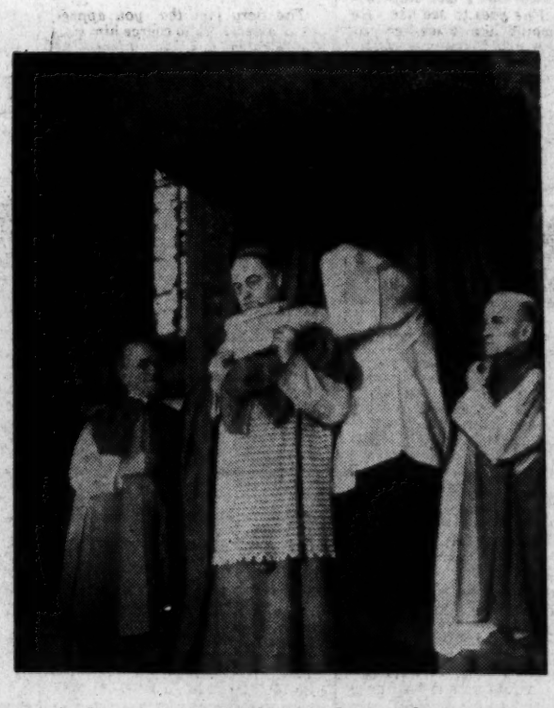
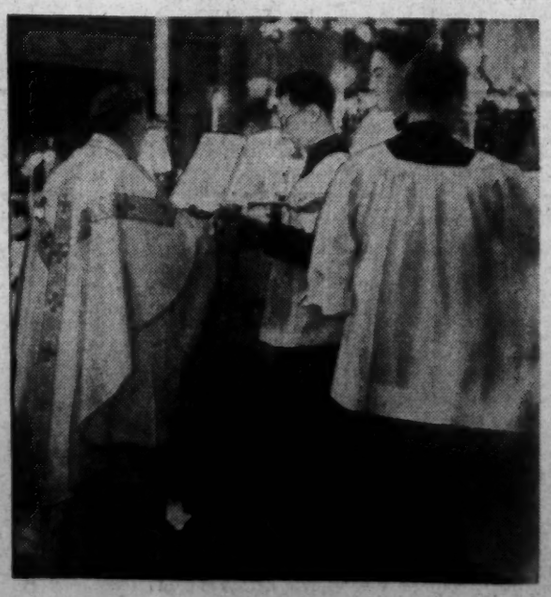
Candid Camera Sees Installation

Archbishop Curley approaches the altar in St. Matthew's as an all-male choir chants "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus" (Behold the Great Priest).

Vested in cope and miter, the new Washington Archbishop listens to the reading of the Papal Bulls, raising the District of Columbia to the dignity of an Archdiocese.



Acolytes help Archbishop Curley to change into the cappa magna, purple robe and ermine cape, as he takes his place on the pontificial throne of the new See.



Century-old rituals attended the installation. Here Bishop McNamara, of St. Gabriel's Church, reads from the Bible by candlelight during the mass.

Mary Haworth's Mail

How Say "No" to Man's Marriage Proposal, Yet Keep His Friendship, Asks Lonely Woman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman, 33 years old. I have few friends and no relatives living in this city. I am not a type to make friends easily. About a year ago I met a young man, 34 years of age, who was previously married and divorced. He contributes to the support of three small children born of this marriage.

I have gone out with him many times and I can truthfully say that it isn't because of any special liking for his company, but because his company is preferable to loneliness. He seems to have grown very fond of me and has asked me to consider marriage with him. Since I am not the least bit in love with him, I would not care to marry him, but I would like to keep him as a friend. I admit this may be a selfish attitude, but can you tell me how to keep his friendship, while declining his proposal? S. T. W.

DEAR S. T. W.: It has been wisely said, "He who would have friends must show himself friendly." And to be "friendly," (the dictionary tells us) is to be "kindly disposed." There is nothing particularly selfish about your wish to retain this man's friendship, as a defense against loneliness, even though you couldn't abide him as a husband.

I believe that fair dealing is at once the simplest and most effective means of establishing and perpetuating friendship. So my advice to you is to tell this man that his companionship means much to you; but that marriage is out of the question. Tell him that you will always be glad to see him as a friend; but that if he decides it is best for you to go your separate ways (since you do not and cannot love him as he would wish) you will understand and accept his decision with no lessening of good will. The kindliness, detachment and self-reliance of such an attitude, tactfully expressed, will do more to secure the man's lasting respect and affection, on a friendly basis, than any amount of coquetry or artifice. M. H.

Girl Asks Appraisal Of Suitor's Worth

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in love with a boy who did not finish high school. My family disapproves of him. They like the boy himself, but they think he is not good enough for me (socially), because of the minor jobs he must accept on account of his lack of education.

I admit he has a good many foolish ideas about life and is quite discouraged; but he is a grand boy and I hate to give him up. I have gone with him for two years and during this time we broke up twice, but immediately came back to each other.

He had a cheap "affair" with another girl during one of these separations and now she calls him all the time, asking him to come to see her. He always tells me when she calls and I have warned him that I will stop seeing him if he goes to see her. He said he would like to see her just once more; and he cannot understand why I feel as I do. Am I wrong in my attitude toward her?

My mother wants me to break off with him—"before I ruin my life" (as she puts it). She says she sees no hopes of our ever finding happiness together. But I think we could; and I will appreciate your opinions. J. A. C.

Gentlemen Do Not Report Their Conquests

DEAR J. A. C.: There is a distasteful implication of boasting in the boy's faithful report of the "other girl's" telephone calls, which suggests that he is something less than a gentleman. In addition, it suggests that he is not above trying to make you jealous, as one supposed means of holding your interest. If there is so little to recommend him, on the side of positive worth, that he must auction his sex appeal, as it were—in order to get attention—then I would side with your family in disapproving of him.

It seems to me, too, that you are straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel, when you scorn the girl for her part in that "cheap love affair," while holding your beau more sinned against than sinning. It appears that he sallied forth in petulant mood after one of your quarrels and broke another girl's heart, with the idea of "showing" you. Then, I take it, he came back to you and "told all," for no better purpose than to prove what a riot he can be with the ladies, when he chooses.

I think your stand with regard to the girl is definitely beside the point. I feel that your beau could not damn himself more indelibly, in seeing her once again, then he has already damned himself by his total conduct toward her—in possessing her without love, discarding her, confidentially defaming her, and employing her unfortunate interest in him as a sword over your head.

The very fact that you apprehend a necessity to coerce him into the "straight and narrow path," is the strongest of all arguments for washing your hands of him. If you cannot trust him to do the loyal and decent thing in every situation, then by all means let him go.

Unquestionably, his meager education will be a lifelong handicap, unless he has the enterprise to educate himself, and evidently he hasn't. My advice to you is to write this romance off as an adolescent hang-over, and devote your time and ocial talents to acquiring better suitors who turn in an admirable performance as a matter of course. Fairy Tale Wedding Gown for Real Life Bride

One of the season's most interesting weddings took place recently when one of "America's ten most eligible girls," Betty Slick, married Lewis Moorman, of Charlottesville, where the bridegroom will continue as a student at the University of Virginia. The daughter of an Oklahoma oil baron wore one of those gracefully traditional gowns reserved for stately blondes. It was of rich duchess silk satin, beautifully fitted into a tight basque and a great flowing skirt which gives the bride's waist an incredible smallness. The collar, gloves and veil are of exquisite rose point of museum importance. And of equal importance to Washingtonians is the fact that this facile sketch of the March bride was made by an artist widely known in this city, Anne Waters, in private life, Mrs. Walter Harrison

Rhubarb Cake

Will Stimulate Jaded Appetite

ROSY-PINK rhubarb is one of those foods that has run the gamut from "esteemed greens" in Shakespeare's time to a juicy fruit known as "pie-plant" in pioneer days. In its metamorphosis, rhubarb has been used in many tempting ways—pie, sauce, baked, conserve and wine being some of the ways it has been used. A spring-time dessert made from rhubarb that will stimulate jaded appetites is an upside-down cake, topped with puffs of whipped cream. The recipe for making the cake is one that will insure a delicate texture.

Rhubarb Upside-Down Cake

Topping—Cut 4 cups rhubarb in ½ inch pieces. Add 8 marshmallows, quartered, and 1 cup sugar. Spread in the bottom of a buttered 10-inch skillet or heavy cake pan.

Cake—Sift flour and measure to 1¾ cups; sift twice with 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Clean ½ cup butter, blend in ¾ cup sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Add 2 well-beaten egg yolks and beat vigorously until smooth and light. Add flour mixture alternately with ½ cup milk, beginning and ending with flour and beating until smooth after each addition. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Beat 2 egg whites until just stiff and gradually beat in ¼ cup sugar; continue to beat until smooth and stiff. Fold lightly but thoroughly into batter. Pour into pan, over the rhubarb. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 35 minutes, or until cake is done. Let cool 10 minutes before turning out of skillet onto serving plate. Serve slightly warm, with whipped cream. Serves 8.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 25.

ABOUT THE smartest piece of showmanship in town this winter was the opening of the Fiesta Danceteria, right smack at the corner of Forty-second street and Broadway. Here a young girl and her escort can get a good meal, cafeteria style, and then dance until they collapse in little wistful heaps, all for one price.

ALICE HUGHES

The place went over like a breeze, and they have just capped the first season by choosing a "Miss Cafeteria Society," nicely borrowing the Glamour Girl contests run in the costly Upper East Side drums. The affair was open to all girls over 16 in the Metropolitan area, professional models and show girls strictly barred. Miss Cafeteria Society was to be one of our many thousands of beautiful young toilers, and the final judging was an unforgettable event.

When the hundred finalists passed in review, the learned judges were hard put to it. At last they decided upon the very lovely Muriel Klushin, who is 18 years old, and thumps a typewriter for a local business house. Her parents, of the old school, give her three nights out a week. She gets $15 a week, is 5 feet 9 in her shoes, and weighs 122. And she is a happy girl. Like so many other young beauties, she would like to be a professional model. And I'll bet she'll get her offers now. At any rate, she was crowned, and received $100—which she earmarked for new spring clothes.

Everybody in the place was struck at once by the poise, grace and good taste of this century of pretty young working girls. By comparison, most of the youngsters around the "smart" clubs are empty-faced, looking as though they are going nowhere at the breathless speed of a feeble snail. The Danceteria girls were bright-eyed, alert, eager—going as far as they could.

How to Be Noticed

If you are one of those persons who stand alone and neglected at teas and receptions, cease worrying. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey is going to do something about it.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The famous crusader announced at her press conference yesterday that she would institute a number of reforms in post-Easter entertaining, now getting under way. Her major effort, she said, would be to provide attention-getting devices for mousey women.

"I am completely fed up—if you will pardon the slang," declared the intrepid president of the Do Something About It League, "with this situation of a few vulgar and pushing upstarts and a few antique dowagers hogging the social scene. Now, I propose to do something to make the ordinary woman more prominent.

"Take the matter of holding court at parties. All that you need is a retinue of alleged admirers—sycophants, financial debtors, curiosity seekers or whatnots. Now, one way to get this is to look 'different.'"

Conservative Hats Attention Getters

"You mean to wear funny hats and things?" asked a news photographer.

"Nothing so simple as that," was the reply. "Hats are out as attention getters. It would be impossible to concoct any hat more weird than what women are already wearing. That is why I myself in selecting an Easter hat went back to conservatism."

Mrs. DeGoofey paused to adjust her flowers turban of pink violets, in which nested two bluebirds. "I feel the very restraint in this hat will make me conspicuous," he said.

"More radical devices than hats are needed these days to make people cluster around you," she continued, "and one that I am especially advocating is a large scarlet letter plastered firmly over the bosom. The possibilities of this device for getting masculine attention are unlimited, as you can readily see."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a woman's page editor, "do you think a genteel woman would want to wear a scarlet letter?"

"A genteel woman has no place at a large party," was the reply. "However, the so-called refined woman might be able to attract some attention by carrying a miniature parasol coquettishly over her shoulder, or by wearing a large Bermuda onion as a lapel gadget, or by having a small goat on a leash or other simple method.

"In fact, I am establishing a bureau of props at the Do Something About It League, where women en route to social events may stop in and pick up little accessories, such as ostrich feather fans, Hawaiian leis, blonde wigs, ankle bracelets, pet monkeys, etc., to make them more conspicuous.

"However, getting attention is not entirely a matter of dress. Quite often it depends upon your being able to shout the other fellow down. This is particularly true at hen parties, where you have no sooner started to tell who your great-grandfather was or what wonderful old antiques you found in the attic or how long you were on the operating table than some militant woman with a louder voice drowns you out with a tale of her ancestors and her antiques.

Snubbing the Crowd Is Effective

"Now, I am working on a miniature individual broadcasting apparatus that women may take to parties where there is strong conversational competition. I also am prepared to sell small parlor megaphones for hen parties.

"Moreover, there is a way of getting attention by the silent method—a method I frequently use. For instance, I always take my hunting stick to teas and receptions, and if I find myself losing out conversationally, I set it up, draw a book out of my handbag, turn my back on the crowd, and start reading. The other guests, piqued at being ignored, immediately cluster around me.

"But, of course, if a woman wants to play absolutely safe, she takes along a paid retinue of admirers. I am now opening a bureau at which any number of suave, smartly dressed persons will be rented by the hour to accompany new or timid guests to parties.

Ritzy Dummies As Companions

"So much depends these days on whom you are seen with, and, so by having on hand some extremely ritzy women for hire, I feel I am rendering a great service to women who are not aggressive socially. A large group of these hired companions taken to a tea could assure a guest of having a small court of her own."

"What is your most dependable method for getting attention at social events, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a charm columnist.

"I seldom lack for attention—even though I am a very retiring woman," was the reply. "However, in case of an emergency, my ace in the hole—if you will pardon the slang—is to mount the nearest chair, clap my hands together, and shout loudly, 'Ladies and gentlemen, something has got to be done!' I have never known this to fail."

How to Wear Proper Hat on Formal Occasions

Hat etiquette, as it concerns the formal and semiformal masculine wardrobe, is strict. With the tuxedo or dinner jacket, there is a choice of three hats: the black or midnight blue snap brim; the black or midnight blue Homburg, and the black or midnight blue folding opera, or crushable silk.

The snap-brim should be creased as college men do it—high and pinched in front, low and spread in back. Broadway celebrities wear this hat with a single crease down the middle. It is the least formal of the dinner jacket hats.

Don't wear the opera hat as though it were taking you to the party. Like the Homburg, get it onto your head, tilt it a little farther than you feel you should, and it will endow you with that rakish look you've always admired.

Roosevelts Fete Costa Rican President-Elect At First State Function in Many Weeks

Secretaries Hull, Woodring, Edison, Wallace and Perkins Among 42 Present; More Parties Planned for Visitors Today

By Hope Ridings Miller

ENTERTAINING AT the first state function in many weeks, President and Mrs. Roosevelt last night feted their house guests, Dr. Rafael Angel Calderon Guarda, president-elect of Costa Rica, and Senora de Calderon Guardia, who arrived in Washington late yesterday afternoon.

The long table at which covers were laid for 42 was decorated with Easter lilies, jonquils, yellow roses, white and yellow snapdragons and maiden-hair fern. Included in the company, in addition to the aides of Dr. Calderon Guardia, were a number of high-ranking United States officials.

Among those present from the visitors' entourage were the second vice president of Costa Rica, Jorge Hine; Don Alfredo Volio, Senor and Senora Luis Demetrio Tinoco, jr., and Senor Victor Manuel Ygelesias. The retiring Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche, also were in the company.

Others there were Secretary of State Cordell Hull; Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring; the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was in the company, as were the Senate Minority Leader and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, the Senate Majority Leader and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, the House Majority Leader, Sam Rayburn, and the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Mrs. Sol Bloom.

Still others there included the House Minority Leader, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Early, Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, the United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, and his daughter, Miss Anne Bullitt; the Assistant Secretary of Sate and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, George T. Summerlin, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Flynn, Miss Marguerite A. LeHand and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan.

Shortly after the visitors arrived at the White House yesterday afternoon, they were entertained at tea by Mrs. Roosevelt. They will leave the White House today and go to the Mayflower for the remainder of their visit in Washington.

Dr. Calderon Guardia will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given today by Secretary Hull at the Carlton. Mrs. Hull, who had planned to return to Washington in time for the visit of the distinguished Costa Ricans, is extending her stay in Florida for several days, as she is still suffering from a cold.

This afternoon the retiring Minister of Costa Rica and Senora Castro Beeche will entertain at a large reception in honor of the visitors. Tomorrow, the new President will be feted at a luncheon to be given at the Pan American Union. He and his wife will leave Washington on Thursday for Chicago, and later will return to New York for a brief stay before sailing homeward on April 6.

BEFORE RECEIVING the Costa Rican visitors yesterday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt was tea-time hostess to the new Minister of Australia and Mrs. Richard Casey, who were entertained in the Red Room.

Still earlier yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess at her annual Easter Monday party for children. About 20 youngsters, including the small relatives and friends who are staying at the White House, were in the company, which enjoyed a motion picture upstairs and then had ice cream and cake in the family dining room.

Mrs. Roosevelt will leave for New York today and tomorrow she will be off to the West Coast for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger. She will return to Washington April 16 and has set her next press conference on that date at 11 a. m.

Party patter: Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck has cards out for an "at home" on Saturday afternoon in honor of Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College. Dr. Glass is coming to town especially to attend the Sweet Briar-Princeton Glee Club concert on Saturday night . . . George Abell will be host at a cocktail party this afternoon for Peggy Le Boutillier (Mrs. Tony Williams), of New York, who is in Washington for a brief visit and is staying at the Shoreham . . . Last evening following the opening performance of "Heavenly Express" at the National Theater, Mr. Abell asked a few friends to his apartment to meet Mrs. Williams, who is one of the most attractive visitors to hit town this season.

Here and there: An unexpected treat is in store for those who attend the Civic Orchestra concert at Constitution Hall tonight . . . Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard will play in the orchestra's tympani section . . . Just watch her jingle those tambourines, beat those drums and ring those bells . . . Incidentally Mrs. Stoddard has as her house guest this week Mrs. Stuart Tod, noted landscape artist of Boston, Mass. Mrs. Tod's father, the late Sir Purdon-Clarke, was president of the Kensington Museum.

Hessler Studio.

Now visiting in Richmond is Mrs. Yelverton Garnett, jr., who left Washington on Saturday for a stay with her aunt, Mrs. Thomas P. Bryan. She will return to Washington on Friday. Mrs. Garnett is a member of the Junior League here and is very active in work of the league

The Proctors Go to Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Proctor are en route to Florida following their wedding here last Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Upon their return they will live at 719 Nineteenth street. The bride is the former Miss Kathryn Jose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jose. Mr. Proctor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Proctor.

The Rev. J. Harvey Dunham officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the home of the bridegroom's parents. A large reception followed the wedding at the home of the bride's parents.

Wearing a white net gown, embroidered in coin dots, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her frock had short puffed sleeves, a sweetheart neckline and the skirt was fashioned of four deep flounces ending in a slight train. She wore white lace mitts and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley centered with a white orchid. A cluster of baby white orchids were clipped to her hair.

Miss Jean Louise Wire, niece of the bride, served as maid of honor. Her frock was of gray net made with a tucked skirt, short sleeves and square neckline. She wore yellow lace mitts and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow freesia and forget-me-nots. The two flower girls, Miss Christine Somerville and Miss Myrl Joan Wire, are both nieces of the bride. They wore taffeta frocks and carried old-fashioned paper-frilled bouquets. Gwynne Proctor served as best man for his brother and Harry Proctor was an usher.

300 Guests Attend Party At the Blinns

Uncle Lancy's Bee (And Presidency Bonnet) Tossed in Punch Bowl

By Elizabeth Henney

Over 300 guests assembled yesterday between 5 and 7 at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Blinn to "help toss Uncle Lancy's Presidential bonnet (bee and all) into the Fish House punch bowl," as per the instructions on the clever invitations of the host and hostess. Fish House punch, by the way, is made according to the famous Southern recipe, so potent that after the second cup most of the guests are in a happy enough frame of mind to toss each other into the punch bowl.

The party was to introduce to the public Mrs. Blinn's twenty-ninth book, "Uncle Lancy for President." Better known as Ethel Hueston, her pen name, the authoress has just finished her third volume about "Uncle Lancy," the lovable character who, with his wife, Aunt Olympia, has been making his imaginary home at the Shoreham in Washington since his elevation to the Senate, according to Miss Hueston's second volume about his career.

Aunt Olympia, by the way, is supposed to be a characterization drawn from a combination of Mrs. Guy M. Gillette and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland. Senator and Mrs. Gillette were on hand during the afternoon to applaud Uncle Lancy's latest political move, as were a number of other Congressional families.

Gruenings Ranking Guests for Affair

Ranking guests during the afternoon were the Governor of Alaska and Mrs. Ernest Gruening, the latter in an effective brown and white silk print. Also early arrivals at the party were the Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. Felthan Watson, she wearing a black taffeta frock with a red velvet bodice.

Mr. and Mrs. Blinn received their guests at the entrance to the drawing room. The hostess was gowned in a floor length, accordion-pleated chiffon of kelly green, fashioned with a shirtwaist frock and long sleeves. Down the front of the frock to the waistline was a row of intriguing rhinestone buttons, in "top-hat" shape, and girdling the frock was a gold leather belt.

Throughout the drawing room were vases of spring flowers, pink snapdragons and yellow jonquils, and the dining table was centered with a gum-drop tree.

Assisting the hostess during the afternoon were Miss Edna Millward, Miss Millicent Taylor, Mrs. Rene Taylor and Miss Eleanor Caswell. Miss Caswell, who came down from New York especially for the party is the daughter of Manhattan's well-known artist, Edward C. Caswell.

Miss Hueston's Books Long Best-Sellers

Miss Hueston, long a favorite author, has been in the best-seller class since she first started writing. Her first book, "Prudence of the Parsonage," sold over 1,000,000 copies and was translated into 12 languages. A bookcase, lining one wall of the drawing room, overflows with copies of her different works.

Mr. and Mrs. Strickland Gillilan were among those who dropped in during the afternoon, as were Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Representative and Mrs. Francis Case, Representative and Mrs. John Kee, Representative and Mrs. Edward Rees, Mrs. Emil Schram, Agnes McCall Parker, Theodore Tiller, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brayman, Admiral and Mrs. Harry Hamlet, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, John S. Young, of New York; Dr. J. W. Hancher, Dr. Winifred Willard, Mrs. Elma Dykes Dulany, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Condon, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Randolph Daniel and many more.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Alfred Knopf Buys Richard Smith's Novel, Which Won Second Place in National Contest

WHEN THE Richard Smiths of New York came down over the week-end to visit Mrs. Smith's mother, Mrs. McCook Knox, they brought along a framed letter from publisher Alfred Knopf. It said that Dick Smith had just won second place in a nationwide contest for a new novel. The best from Publisher Alfred Knopf, will publish his entry as soon as he works it from synopsis into book form, and they also want him to do two more.

A business man in the day time, Mr. Smith, who is in his twenties, worked on the contest evenings. Mrs. Smith, the former Brownie Knox, did all the typing, finishing five minutes before the deadline and rushing down by taxi to deliver it in person to the publishers. The novel is a sea story with a mystery twist.

THE SMITHS told Washington friends of their good luck at the tea given for them by Mrs. Knox over the week-end. Her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, where she is living until she moves into her remodeled house in Georgetown, is filled with early American paintings which Mrs. Knox found in attics and antique shops and had restored. She is particularly pleased with some examples of the Hudson River School which she found last summer. One entire wall is hung with lithographs of scenes in the Civil War, in which Mrs. Knox's ancestors, the "Fighting McCooks," distinguished themselves.

Among those who dropped in were John Walker, curator of the new Mellon Gallery, his English wife, Lady Margaret Walker, Betty and Marion Shouse, who wore tweed suits; Mrs. Selden Chapin, with a Florida sunburn, and Richard Wilmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., dashed in for a moment. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Herndon Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, who are deep in plans for doing over an old house on N street.

The hostess wore a long spring print, bright flowers splashed on a black background. "Brownie" Smith had chosen a brown and white wool dress with a huge halo hat trimmed in white.

BETWEEN THE SCENES of "Lady in Waiting" last week we had the pleasure of meeting the team of Brock and Margaret Pemberton. The producer sat in the middle of the orchestra scratching notes on little pieces of blue paper and conferring with Antoinette Perry, the director. At the side of Mr. Pemberton was a nurse, as he is convalescing from pneumonia. Asked if she were going to accompany Mr. Pemberton back to New York, his attractive wife said jokingly: "Don't worry! I'm not going to leave him with a trained nurse!"

Mrs. Pemberton supervises all the costumes for Pemberton productions. With Alan Napier, handsome leading man in "Lady in Waiting," she attended the gala party given by the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas on Saturday night.

THOUGH NOBODY would be a bit surprised if the Potomac should freeze over for skating during this wintry spring, the Washington Ice Club is winding up the season with an exhibition on Sunday morning. There will be solos, sister acts, waltzes and a triumphal grand march, and members can bring their friends.

Tomorrow afternoon the competition for the best skater in the club will be held, and the winner will be presented with the James Clement Dunn cup. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger have offered a medal to the person who has shown the most improvement.

DOROTHY SNELL, runner up in the national championships, and Mrs. Arthur Clephane and Charles Mitchell, of Baltimore, the latter noted for sensational leaps and spins, will do solo exhibitions. Mrs. Clephane will pair with Mrs. Creighton Peet for a number. The waltzers will include Stephen Morris, Mrs. Clephane, John Borton, Mrs. Abe Fortas, Mrs. Melville Grosvenor, Clarence Hereshoff, Ezra Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Parker, the Creighton Peets, Mary Frances Rollow, Clare Driscoll and David Speck.

Capt. J. B. Sherman And Bride Return From Honeymoon

Capt. and Mrs. John B. Sherman have returned to Washington after a brief wedding trip following their marriage on Saturday. Capt. Sherman is stationed at the War College, where he is a student.

The bride is the former Miss Mabel Hundley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben. T. Hundley, of Leavenworth, Kans., and niece of Col. Frank E. Parker, of this city.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Oliver, chaplain, U. S. A., officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the Walter Reed Chapel at 5 o'clock. Dr. and Mrs. Joseph J. McHale, of this city, were attendants at the ceremony.

Miss Mildred Kight, Harry Buck to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kight, of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Kight, to Harry Buck, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Buck, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

Miss Phillips, John McCarthy Are Married

Msgr. Thomas Smyth Officiates at Ceremony; Honeymoon in South

The marriage of Miss Helen Martha Phillips and John J. McCarthy took place yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament with Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Howard Leon Phillips. Mr. McCarthy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah McCarthy.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Maxwell Harrell Stokes, the bride wore traditional ivory satin. Her gown was made with a heartshaped neckline and long train. Her tulle veil was held by a coronet of pearls.

Mrs. Maxwell Harrell Stokes, gowned in fuschia taffeta, served as matron of honor. She wore a matching clover hat and carried rose-shaded sweet peas. Bridesmaids were Miss Antoinette Klesner, Mrs. James Smith, Mrs. Clifton Whitehurst and Miss Margaret McCarthy, sister of the bridegroom. Two of the girls were gowned in cameo pink taffeta while the other two wore dome blue frocks. They wore contrasting flower hats and carried old-fashioned bouquets.

John V. McCarthy was best man for his cousin. Ushers were William Bryant, Francis X. Beamer, Edmond Higginson and Edward Daley.

Immediately following the wedding there was a large reception at Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Phillips received, wearing a pearl gray crepe frock with a lace jacket and a corsage of violets. Mrs. McCarthy had chosen a blue lace gown and her flowers were orchids.

Thursday Club Gives a Party

Jack Arrington, president of the club, received, assisted by Hal Crowell and Miss Achsah Dorsey. Among those attending were Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Joanna Huntington, Miss Barbara Bealle, Miss Julie Cahill, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Rosalyn Buchanan, Miss Ann Buchanan, Miss Margaret Cotter, Miss Claire Cotter, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Berenice Merchant, Miss Houston Niller, Miss Courtney Owens, Miss Dita Davis, Miss Carol Lathrop, Miss Elinore Gudger and many more.

Christ Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Dorothy Belle Simons and Ernest F. Kausch, jr., last evening at 8 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Simons, of this city. Mr. Kausch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest F. Kausch, of Watertown, S. Dak.

Palms, lilies and white gladioli adorned the church for the wedding at which the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel officiated. An organ played preceding the ceremony and John Murphy, tenor, sang.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore ivory satin. Her gown was fashioned with a full skirt, long train and sweetheart neckline. Her full length veil of bridal illusion was held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley surrounding an orchid. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Miss Barbara Simons, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a gown of periwinkle blue with a bouffant skirt and net embroidered bodice. She carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and blue delphinium. Her head dress was fashioned of open roses matching her bouquet.

Bridesmaids included Miss Diane Steers, Miss Marie Federici, both of this city. Miss Louise Kausch, sister of the bridegroom; and Miss Doris Smith, of Red Bank, N. J. Two of the girls were dressed in aqua gowns made like that of the maid of honor, while the other two were dressed in pink. They carried bouquets of yellow and Talisman roses and wore matching flowers in their hair.

Douglas M. Butturff, of this city, served as best man. Ushers were Charles Garmire Hoyt, C. Marshall Hicks, Austin Gattis, John Southmayd, John A. Kendrick and Jack Killea.

Immediately after the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. When the couple left for the wedding trip the bride wore a print dress with a light blue fitted coat, matching hat and brown kid accessories. Following their honeymoon the couple will live in Colonial Village, Arlington, Va.

McCormick Stresses Dignity of Work

Most Americans Will Fill Commonplace Jobs in Next 20 Years, Census Official Tells Business Women

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The major portion of American workers are destined to fill commonplace jobs in the coming 20 years, so it behooves the country to revise its outlook on employment and recognize the dignity of all work that serves a useful function in society.

This was the opinion expressed by Ernest J. McCormick, assistant chief of the occupation census, Department of Commerce, in a talk last night at the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club at the Admiral.

Speaking on "Women's Opportunity to Earn in a Democracy," Mr. McCormick predicted that the trend in the future would be toward only a slight increase in employment in the more alluring occupations and professions. "Most of the combined efforts of all workers must be in the actual production of necessities or in direct services," he said.

Shifts Are Noted In Proportions

There has been a steady increase in the number of women in gainful occupations during the past two decades, said Mr. McCormick, but the proportion has not gone up noticeably because the number of men workers has increased also. There have been shifts in major fields in which women have been employed, he said—a decrease in the number in agriculture; a slight decrease in industry and an increase in professional, clerical and sales work.

Because of the growth in the population and in the proportion of persons of working ages, the total number of both men and women seeking employment will continue to increase, but it is doubtful that there will be a material gain in the proportion of women over the present 22 per cent, he said.

Miss S. Winifred Burwell, assistant trust officer of the Metropolitan National Bank and former president of the Zonta Club, shared the program with Mr. McCormick, discussed "Woman's Opportunity to Hold Property in a Democracy."

Miss Burwell quoted the statement of Women Investors of America, Inc., following a survey, that "the American woman is the world's greatest capitalist." She quoted statistics assembled by this fact-finding institution to substantiate the assertion.

Judge Howorth Presents Speakers

Among the surprising facts were these: Women own 26 per cent of all life insurance and are beneficiaries of 80 per cent of the policies; they hold 25 per cent of the Nation's jobs; buy 89 per cent of the Nation's goods; hold 65 per cent of all savings accounts; hold title to 40 per cent of all real estate; represent 40 per cent of all common stock in corporations; 54 per cent of all preferred stock; 54 per cent of all outstanding bonds, and own and control 60 per cent of the national wealth.

"Woman's opportunity to earn goes hand in hand with freedom," declared Miss Burwell, "and opportunity to earn opens the opportunity to acquire property, and to invest." She advised, in making an investment, always to consult a disinterested third party—preferably one's banker—and never to be carried away by high-powered salesmanship.

Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, president of the club, presented the speakers.

The dinner was in charge of Miss Ora Marshino, assisted by Mrs. Anna L. Burdick and the Misses Esther Colvin, Mabel E. Fredd and Nina Schnell.

Takoma Park Health Center Plans Benefit Concert May 11

Mrs. Carolyn O. Green Will Direct Choral Group of Women's Club; Mrs. Robertson Is Hostess to Meeting

Plans were made yesterday by Takoma Park Health and Welfare Center for a concert to be given May 11, during Music Week, for the benefit of its welfare work. The program will be presented by the choral group of the Takoma Park Women's Club under the direction of Mrs. Carolyn O. Green, at the Presbyterian Church, Tulip and Maple avenues, Takoma Park.

The meeting of committee chairmen yesterday was called by Mrs. George E. Robertson, president of the center, at her home, 227 Willow avenue. The chairmen include Mrs. Walter P. Harman, past president of the Takoma Park Club, who is general chairman; Mrs. Margaret E. Dodge, chairman of tickets; Mrs. Eugene J. Hurtle, publicity; Mrs. W. W. Swett, music; Mrs. Clarence E. Ross, sponsors; Mrs. R. Deane Shure, programs; Mrs. Ralph W. Brown, advertisements.

The Health and Welfare Center acts as a clearing house for all applications for relief in Takoma Park and adjacent territory. It also helps those emergency cases which cannot be handled by public agencies. The center meets needs not touched by public agencies, such as providing milk for undernourished children, cod liver oil, eyeglasses, shoes and clothing. Last year 1,000 articles of clothing were given out. Information as the proper welfare group is furnished to applicants and, when necessary, the contact is made for them and help given to push the case to a quick conclusion.

The Takoma Park Health and Welfare Association, which maintains the center on Columbia avenue, is composed of 23 local groups. Each has a representative on the executive board. Mrs. Emily B. McKenna, county nurse, and Dr. Kathryn Chapman are in charge of the health work and the children's and pre-natal clinics. A class in home nursing and care of the sick is being conducted by the Red Cross with 23 mothers enrolled. There is also a nursery school.

The problem of securing the cooperation of the 23 groups was undertaken two years ago by the Takoma Park Women's Club, when a meeting of agency representatives was called by Mrs. Harman. The organization was formed with the elemination of duplication in welfare services as its immediate objective.

Mrs. Robertson, who was elected president at that time, has continued to serve, carrying on a major portion of the work, with the aid of volunteers.

Hadassah Plans Benefit Fete

The Washington Chapter of Hadassah has planed a child welfare and Purim luncheon for noon tomorrow at the Jewish Community Center. The proceeds from this luncheon for mothers and children will go to Hadassah's child welfare stations in Palestine. One dollar provides nourishing lunches for a Palestinian child for a month.

In the afternoon a program will be given for the children. Miss Phyllis Schwart, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Schwartz, will sing. Phyllis, who is a student at Macfarland Junior High School, sang recently at Constitution Hall with the National Symphony Orchestra, and was acclaimed by Hans Kindler, the conductor, for her beautiful voice.

Several movie shorts are to be shown through the courtesy of Sidney Lust. In addition, the Habonim Singers, a group of local Paole-Zion boys and girls, will give Palestinian songs and dances in Hebrew.

The Purim luncheon and entertainment will take the place of the regular Hadassah monthly meeting, in order that the children may participate in the child welfare work during the Easter holidays. The regular Wednesday institute meeting scheduled for this day has been canceled. Mrs. Max Offenberg is chairman of school lunches and Mrs. T. Naftalin and Mrs. Louis Janof are in charge of the entertainment.

Bryn Mawr Club to Meet

Miss Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, will speak on "Washington, the City of Extremes," at a meeting of the Bryn Mawr Club tonight at the home of Miss Olivia Fountain.

Donovan Talks To Federation On Taxation

Women Discuss Welfare Needs At March Meeting

The District Federation of Women's Clubs, which was addressed by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, at its March meeting yesterday at Hotel 2400, divided its attention between taxation and welfare needs at its morning sessions. Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, the president, presided.

Preceding the talk by Maj. Donovan, who was introduced by Mrs. Norman E. McIndoo, chairman of the Department of the American Home, the federation passed a resolution presented by Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, chairman of welfare.

The recommendations included indorsement of the change in the limitation for personal services in the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare from 10 to 12 per cent of the appropriations for this division as proposed in the estimates of the Budget Bureau; advocate support of provision for contractual foster homes to which dependent and neglected children needing emergency care can be sent, thus relieving the bad situation at the Receiving Home for Children; an increase in the number of case workers in the Child Welfare Division so as to provide an average case load which is considered standard for the services required; a full time doctor and such an increase in personnel as will provide adequate care for the inmates of the Home for the Aged and Infirm; and establishment of a central application and certification bureau where applications for all forms public relief can be made.

Following the luncheon the afternoon speakers were Robert D. Kohn, vice president of the New York World's Fair, and chairman of the committee on theme, who spoke on masterpieces of art and architecture, and John D. Lippy, who gave an illustrated travel talk on the West.

New Deal Aims At Totalitarian Rule, Says Taft

Ohioan Charges Federal Expenses Doubled, Bureaucratic Control

Philadelphia, March 25 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft accused the New Deal Administration today of doubling the expense and activity and entirely changing the character of the Federal Government through its "planned economy" program of regulating commerce, agriculture, industry and labor.

The Senator, seeking the Republican Presidential nomination, warned in a speech prepared for delivery at the Republican Women's Luncheon Club of Southeastern Pennsylvania that continuance of the New Deal's policies means "continued depression and stagnation and in time a totalitarian state."

Changes in the character of the Government, he said, have been accomplished by delegation of power to new bureaus to make regulations expanding the law until the lawmaking activities of the bureaus exceed those of Congress.

Where legislation prevents agencies from making regulations, such agencies issue "interpretive bulletins" which accomplish the same thing, Taft contended. He referred particularly to the National Labor Relations Board, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Wage-Hour Administration.

Billings Marries in Reno

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Warren K. Billings and Josephine Rudolph were married yesterday in Reno, Nev. Billings, coprisoner with Tom Mooney, became acquainted with her at one of his many hearings. Convicted for participation in the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing of 1916, Billings' life sentence was pardoned last year by Gov. Culbert L. Olson

Cosmic Hangover Keeps Cables, Radio Jittery

New York, March 25 (AP).—Communications within the United States and from Europe suffered today from a cosmic hangover left by yesterday's extraordinary violent electrical bombardment of the earth from clusters of spots on the sun.

There were authoritative predictions of a less powerful recurrence of the disturbance within 28 days.

Short wave broadcasts from Berlin, London, Paris and other capitals abroad still were unreliable.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., reporting in midafternoon the restoration of its London and Paris cable circuits, added that Amsterdam was being heard only intermittently.

Curtis Co. Earned $2,142,516 in 1939

Philadelphia, March 25 (INS).—Declraing that the publishing business has changed materially during the last decade, Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., in his annual report to stockholders today referred to the need for capital revision.

"If this can be accomplished," he said, "we face a most encouraging decade of the 1940's."

Net income of the company for 1939, it was revealed, was $35,657,070 and earnings were $2,142,516, or at the rate of 6.09 per cent. In 1938 net income was $33,038,422. Profits were $1,279,162 and the percentage of profits to net income was 3.90.

Buckeyes Start Grid Drills Today

Columbus, Ohio, March 25 (AP).—Ohio State University's Western Conference football champions fire the first gun in defense of their title tomorrow as they launch their six-week spring training grind—and Coach Francis A. Schmidt thinks the prospects are not so bad.

Schmidt has few replacement problems, for he has plenty of freshmen and 1939 reserves to plug the gaps. The big losses are Vic Marino, left guard; Frank Zadworney, the demon blocking right half; Capt. Steve Andrako, center, and Esco Sarkkinen, end.

G. H. McNamara's Funeral Today

The funeral of George H. McNamara, retired doorkeeper of the Senate Finance Committee, will be at Trinity Methodist Church, Annapolis, Md., at 2:30 p. m. today.

20 Minutes of Ice Water Fathers a Female Rabbit

By Howard W. Blakeslee,
Associated Press Scientific Editor.

New York, March 25.—Birth of a female rabbit whose mother was merely 20 minutes of the coldness in ice water was announced today in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The ovum which grew into this little bunny was cooled while in its own mother's body and she later gave it normal birth. This event marked the first time that science has accomplished virgin birth in the same animal where the ovum originated.

The report was made by Dr. Gregory Pincus and Herbert Shapiro, respectively, of Clark University and Vassar College. Dr. Pincus two years ago startled the scientific world with the discovery that rabbits' ova can be fertilized by immersion in salt water.

All these rabbits were females.

The ice water bunny came from trying a new experiment, to learn whether cold alone might act as a father. Immediately appeared a surprising discovery, that in glass tubes ova were activated more often by cold alone than by the chemical solutions.

The final tests were made on 16 living rabbits. A brass cylinder was placed around one of the two fallopian tubes of each animal. This tube is the duct in which ova emerge.

FCC Receives Static-Free Radio Plans

De Mars and Thomas Testify as Hearing Is Opened Again

Parts of a plan for commercial use of one of radio's latest improvements—static-free broadcasting, which is still in an experimental state—were laid before the Federal Communications Commission at a hearing yesterday.

For frequency modulation broadcasting which is expected to make possible not only static-free reception but transmission of the natural speaking or singing voice, Paul A. De Mars, technical director of the Yankee Network, outlined a need for three classes of stations.

He said the kind of frequency-modulation stations should be determined by the size and geographical distribution of communities to be served. For the present, he recommended confining frequency-modulation broadcasting to urban areas.

Henry P. Thomas, General Electric radio engineer, described advantages of frequency-modulation over standard broadcasting, contending a one-watt station under the new method to be the equivalent of a 50-watt transmitter of the present type.

Other witnesses were Dr. Greenleaf Whittier Pickard, consultnig engineer for the Yankee Network, and E. R. Weir, General Electric engineer.

$60,000 Prize Up for Security Building Art

U. S. Wants 12 Murals And Two Sculptures; Competition Open

A $60,000 prize for American artists was offered yesterday for decorating the new Social Security Building here.

The prize includes payments to be made for two sculptures and a dozen murals, and the Federal Works Agency announced that competition would be open to all American artists.

In addition the agency said that $6,940 worth of decoration was required for the steamship, President Andrew Jackson, now being built by the Maritime Commission, and a similar competition will be held to award the contract.

Deadline for the ship decoration designs is June 1, for the Social Security sculptures, September 3, and for the Social Security murals, October 15.

Largest single awards will be contracts for two sculptures, 8 feet high, for the main entrance hall. They will be paid for at the rate of $8,000 each, and are expected to "be related to or embody the ideals or story of Social Security." They should not, the announcement said, "represent a portrait of any specific person."

Other jobs include a three-panel mural in the auditorium for $3,520, and five murals at the auditorium entrance, for $19,980. On the basis of the competition, artists will later be invited to submit designs for murals in the cafeteria, board room, recreation room, and lobby, totaling $20,980.

U. S. Court Opens Session in New Building Quarters

Harrisonburg, Va., March 25 (AP).—Judge John Paul held his first session of United States district court in the new courtroom on the third floor of the new Federal building here today. The building was dedicated Saturday.

The grand jury returned 25 indictments, including three against Federal prisoners who escaped from the Salem jail March 22. They were Corbin Purdue, charged with violation of the National Motor Theft Act; Charles F. Spry, charged with postoffice burglary, and Mark W. Alexander, charged with the theft of mail bags.

The first case to be tried in the courtroom was that of James Keyser, merchant of Overall, Page County, charged with handling untaxed liquor. The case will go to the jury tomorrow.

Court Upholds Optometry In D. C. Store

Appeals Tribunal Sustains Lansburgh's, Buhl Optical Co.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a District Court finding that a department store is entitled to engage in the practice of optometry. It maintained that the practice of optometry lacks the confidential relationship of physician and patient.

The opinion, written by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, affirmed the right of Lansburgh & Bro., and the Buhl Optical Co. to engage in optometry.

Asking an injunction to restrain the two concerns from engaging in optometry in Washington, two licensed and registered optometrists, Dr. Edwin H. Silver, Farragut Medical Building, and Dr. M. Luther Dicus, of 1028 Connecticut avenue northwest, had brought suit in District Court. The court dismissed the suit.

Pine Praises Capital Civic Interest

Society of Natives Urged to Inculcate Community Pride In Newcomers

Decrying the "untrue charge" that Washington is a city of transients having no community interest, David A. Pine, newly appointed justice of the United States District Court, urged last night that newcomers be promptly brought into civic groups and movements.

Speaking at the Society of Natives, Pine pointed out that "your society promotes pride in the fact that, while it has not reached perfection by any means, the City of Washington is ranked among the best-governed cities in the world."

Pine, who was elected to membership in the society last night, urged that it maintain "an eager and venturesome attitude for greater improvement in our social, economic and political conditions."

Interest in Newcomers

"This society must be alert not to become an exclusive club; not to assume that by accident of birth you have a standing in the community a little above those who were born elsewhere and who have come here to live and reside with you," he said.

While newcomers are not eligible to join the Society of Natives, Pine said, "I urge you to invite them into your other civic groups, so they may take an active interest in the affairs of the city."

Pine said the Society of Natives promoted pride in the following facts: "That our level of education stands among the highest; that our standard of living is second to none; that Washington offers such opportunities that many whose interests, personal, political or financial, are elsewhere, choose Washington as their home; that many come here from elsewhere because the opportunities for education and raising families and for a finer, better and cleaner livelihood are greater here than in their old homes."

Change of Name Urged

A proposal to set up several additional standing committees on civic affairs was included among suggested amendments to its constitution and by-laws. Another proposal would change the organization's name to District of Columbia Society. Action on the amendments will be taken at the annual meeting in May.

The society at last night's meeting at the Continental Hotel elected the following other new members, in addition to Pine: William J. Taylor, Frederick A. Blumer, Marguerite S. Hendley, Vincent Toomey, Julia D. DeLand, John B. Robeson.

Georgetown

The Georgetown Citizens Association went on record in favor of the proposed investigation of small loan companies in the District, and in opposition to legalized horse racing in the District. Both resolutions were introduced by Frederick M. Bradley, chairman of the executive committee.

Two new members were admitted. They are Philip W. Bonsal and Hal H. Draper. B. H. Meyer presided.

Mid-City

The Mid-City Citizens Association recommended that the tax system of the District be drawn so that all those who spend the greater portion of the year in the District will be subject to local taxation.

The association also opposed pending legislation which would provide a public defender, proposing instead that the courts be empowered to set aside money from their own funds to pay for counsel for indigent cases.

The group opposed the proposed filling station at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, and commended Capt. Jere Sullivan and the officers of the Second Precinct for their record of enforcement in the past three months.

This action followed addresses by Lieut. Paul A. Barnes and Precinct Detective Harold L. Hodge, who said that 5,276 arrests were made during that period in the Second Precinct.

The National Park and Planning Commission was asked to give the Mid-City section the same consideration in purchasing property for playground sites as other sections.

Mission Saves Crime Costs, Says Rodeheaver

The Central Union Mission saved the Federal Government $400,000 in 1939, declared Homer Rodeheaver Monday night, if only 200 of its converts were saved from potential criminal careers. Addressing the advance gifts committee and team captains of the pending campaign to raise $100,000 for an annex with W. W. Everett as the general chairman, he spoke at the Women's City Club.

"It cost the Government approximately $2,000 each to apprehend and convict a criminal," said Rodeheaver, "so this multiplied by just 10 per cent of the 2,158 men converted in 1939 in the mission chapel mounts up to almost a half million dollars."

He reported that during the last five years, 303,058 men had attended mission services. He declared that giving free beds and meals to these men was a more practical Christianity than building large churches and conducting campaigns to get people to attend church services, because the mission functions 365 days of the year.

Capital News in Brief

Child 'Beats' Rescuers

Two-year-old Richard Leslie locked himself in a second-floor bathroom at his home, 2811 Albemarle street northwest, yesterday, then made his way out unaided as firemen raced to the scene.

Unable to open the door, the child's mother, Mrs. Frank Leslie, called the fire board. Before the rescue squad arrived, Richard unlocked the door and walked out unperturbed by his experience.

Burns Fatal to Vet

Daniel McAuliffe, 52-year-old colored World War veteran, of 1770 Park road northwest, died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital of burns he received when a cigarette fired his bed in the garage at the Park road address late Sunday.

Extinguishers Found

A 25-year-old man was arrested last night after a dozen second-hand dealers reported a sudden over-supply of fire extinguishers.

Police recovered 24 extinguishers which William Taylor, colored, of the 1400 block of W street northwest, allegedly stole from as many apartment houses. Taylor was charged with petit larceny by Detective Sergt. Earl Baker.

Boy Falls Out of Auto

Businessmen Meet on Slate For Allen Post

Citizens' Societies Reiterate Demand For D. C. Resident

Demands for a "bona fide District resident" to succeed George Allen as Commissioner were repeated last night at meetings of citizens associations, while business leaders met to draft a slate of nominees for the post which might command support of all local groups.

All three citizens groups meeting last night, the Society of Natives, the Georgetown Citizens' Association, and the Mid-City Citizens Association, went on record favoring a District resident for Commissioner.

The Georgetown Association recommended that the new Commissioner should be "not only a resident of the District but also a man active in local affairs with firsthand knowledge of District problems."

George A. Warren, representative of the District Suffrage Association, and Dr. F. Thomas Evans, former president of the Democratic League of the District, told members of the Mid-City Association that "we must convince President Roosevelt of earnest desire to have a bona fide resident of the District as Commissioner."

William E. Richardson, member of the Society of Natives, received that group's indorsement for the post, but said he could not give up his law practice to accept it. Although he is now a resident of Maryland, Richardson pointed out he had not voted there for the past three and one-half years. The society reiterated its traditional stand in favor of a Washington resident for the post.

Presidents of five Business Men's Associations met last night to discuss candidates for the Federation of Business Men's indorsement. Louis L. Bowdler, president of the federation, said a further meeting would be held tonight at which representatives of other member bodies would be heard, after which the names selected would be made public.

J. P. Rogers, president of the Northeast Business Men's Association, of which Bowdler is a past president, said the Northeast group would probably propose Bowdler for the post at their meeting Thursday evening.

2 Women Nab Suspect In Robbery

One Calls Husband Of Other; Bandits Get $428 Loot In 4 Holdups

A suspected gunman was captured through the strategy of two girls last night, as bandits escaped with $428 in four holdups.

Mrs. Louise Graham, of 1234 Thirty-fourth street northwest, clerk in High's ice cream store at 1227 Thirty-fourth street northwest, recognized a customer last night as the gunman who robbed the store of $7 last week. She signaled a friend, Margaret Brantley, who was standing outside the store, and Miss Brantley hurried to the nearby Graham residence.

$340 at Liquor Store

A bandit entered the Federation Liquor Store, 1025 Ninth street northwest, and left with $340 after holding up Samuel Newman, of 3023 Seventeenth place northeast, the proprietor, and Leroy Davenport, colored delivery boy. Newman said $300 represented a bank deposit that was to have been called for by a messenger service.

Samuel McLurkin, of 1257 Irving street northwest, delivery boy for a liquor store at 3429 Mount Pleasant street northwest, reported to police he found himself confronted by a thug as he was delivering an order in the 1500 block Lamont street northwest. The footpad took $13 in cash, cigarettes, and a quart of whisky. McLurkin, and a passerby, Charles Kirby, of 3560 Eighteenth street northwest, chased the bandit for several blocks in vain.

Woman Robbed of $57

Two assailants took $18.75 from James W. Smith, 33, colored, of 405 P street northwest, as he waited for a street car at New Jersey avenue and P street northwest. Similarly victimized was Nellie Pierce, colored, of 1782 T street northwest, who was robbed of $57 near her home.

Lewis Thigpen, 23, colored, of 300 T street northwest, was arrested last night by Detective W. C. Fawcett and charged with housebreaking in connection with the robbery of a beauty parlor at 733 Thirteenth street northwest. At the time Beatrice Cochence, of 1914 G street northwest, was grabbed by an intruder, threatened with death, and robbed of $4.20.

Burglars removed the bricks around a rear window of Maurice L. Berstein's drug store at Eighteenth street and Florida avenue northwest and looted the store of liquor, cigarettes and an undetermined amount of cash.

Ambers Loses Title as N. B. A. Cracks Down

Day, Angott To Fight for His Crown

Archibald to Suffer Similar Fate Unless He Meets Scalzo; Congress to Get Bill

The National Boxing Association's "break up Mike Jacobs" campaign began in earnest yesterday as that body declared Lightweight Champion Lew Ambers' world championship vacant on the grounds that he failed to defend his title within the required six months.

At the same time Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, revealed that he plans to place his bill calling for a sweeping investigation of the professional fight business before Congress this week.

His bill is expected to create a furore in the boxing world, with Jacobs and other New York fight promoters and managers being called to Washington to answer Congressional queries in preliminary hearings on the measure.

First Move in Drive

Col. Harvey L. Miller, president of the N. B. A., described the association's move as the first step to bring an end to the boxing "reign" of Promoter Mike Jacobs in Madison Square Garden.

"It appears that the N. B. A., reflecting a country-wide boxing sentiment, is fed up on all the title fights going into New York and for one promoter," the N. B. A.'s decree stated.

"The hinterland never gets to see champions in action anyhow, so they hardly can be blamed for finally expressing unwillingness to continue seeing boxing monopolized."

Day to Meet Angott

Miller said the N. B. A. will grant titular recognition to the winner of the Davey Day-Sammy Angott bout which was closed yesterday in Chicago.

Day, ranked No. 1, and Angott, rated No. 2, will fight for the title in a 15-round match in Chicago, Louisville or Pittsburgh, the Associated Press reported. A Louisville, Ky., club has posted an offer of $10,000 for the match on the eve of the Kentucky Derby, May 3, it was said.

In stripping Ambers of his title, the N. B. A. also took a slap at Al Weill, New York manager of Ambers and Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald.

Weill has been given until Thursday to place Archibald under contract to fight Pete Scalzo, N. B. A.'s No. 1 contender, for the featherweight championship.

"Day's manager, like Scalzo's, refuses to sign a long-term contract with Mike Jacobs and therefore can't get a title fight," Miller said.

"The next step will be to strip Archibald of his title if Weill continues to ignore the N. B. A. ruling," Miller said.

The N. B. A.'s statement yesterday called attention to the fact that Henry Armstrong must sign to defend his welterweight championship against Milt Aron, Chicago No. 1 contender, before May 29 or suffer the same fate as Ambers.

"Our body regrets very much taking action against Ambers," Miller said, "because Ambers is a good fighter. However, Day and Angott are good fighters, who, like Ambers, have won and lost some nontitle bouts."

It was the Archibald-Harry Jeffra fight for the featherweight title in Washington last October that led to Representative Kennedy's demand for a Congressional investigation of boxing.

The "no title defense in six months" rule is the same under which the N. B. A. withdrew titular recognition from John Henry Lewis and Mickey Walker. Armstrong vacated his featherweight title and Sixto Escobar his bantamweight crown a few hours before similar steps by the N. B. A.

Slip Madigan To Coach Loyola, It Is Reported

By the United Press

Berkeley, Calif., March 25.—The Berkeley Gazette said today it had learned from an unimpeachable source that Edward Patrick (Slip) Madigan, ousted St. Mary's College football coach, has accepted the position of head coach at Loyola University in Los Angeles.

The Gazette said Madigan went to Los Angeles last week and decided Friday to accept the Loyola job.

Madigan was not available at his home for comment. It was rumored that he was dickering with Loyola authorities.

The Gazette said Madigan "made up his mind last Friday to take over the gridiron position at the Los Angeles institution. Madigan will be the sucessor to Mike Pecarovich, who was fired at the end of the disastrous 1939 campaign."

Cards Give Medwick Till Tonight to Sign

By the Associated Press

St. Petrsburg, Fla., March 25.—The war of nerves between Holdout Joe Medwick and the St. Louis Cardinals is getting really serious.

The club has set Tuesday night as a "deadline" and if the slugging outfielder is not signed by that time it was said his $18,000 offer will be withdrawn. The move was interpreted as a warning the club isn't fooling.

Joe has his neck bowed and there was no indication he would back down—or even compromise—on demands for restoration of his 1938 salary of $20,000.

Following another unsuccessful meeting today, General Manager Branch Rickey said:

"We have reached a stage of temporary finality and this was my last conference with Medwick."

The Cardinals will break camp here tomorrow and if Medwick and the bosses fail to get together solution of the problem probably will be postponed indefinitely.

President Sam Breadon will be on his way to Cuba with the team, Rickey will be starting on a tour of his minor league camps, and Medwick will be left out in the cold to run the risk of suspension—10 days after the opening of the season.

It's the principle of the thing—not the mere $2,000, difference, which is virtually pin money to them—insist the Redbird executives.

"Two thousand dollars—phooie," Breadon is reported to have said.

Manufacturer Is Prospective Yankee Owner

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—Byron Clark, jr., who is as familiar with the New York Yankee financial structure as Bill Dickey is with Red Ruffing's Sunday pitch, thinks the next owner of the world champions will be "a national advertiser who might buy the club as a medium for radio advertising."

Clark, in his sumptuous offices in midtown New York, was busy all day discounting rumors again flooding town—to the effect this time the Yanks were to be sold either to a syndicate headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley and former Gov. James Cox of Ohio, or one headed by Joseph Patterson, New York published, and an unnamed associate.

The latest rumors that have been mushrooming since the death of Col. Jacob Ruppert over a year ago came today in a World-Telegram copyrighted story from Florida.

The gray-haired, deeply tanned Clark, who as attorney for the estate of Col. Jacob Ruppert will know about a sale as soon as any one else, said he had no authority-mh mh mh mhmh had no knowledge of the rumors—and he said he doubted if there is any syndicate actually in position to swing the deal.

"The number of purchasers is very limited," he pointed out, "any potential purchaser must have plenty of money, a sufficient interest in baseball, and a desire to be identified with such a big undertaking that is not a sure-fire investment."

That's why he thinks it more likely a manufacturer, who advertises on a Nation-wide scale, is the likeliest candidate to buy the properties valued variously at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Clark knows of but one offer that has been made for the greatest empire in baseball—a paltry $3,000,000. It was made by a source unknown to him, through a middleman whom he personally knows is "trustworthy."

Treasury Girls Win Post A. A. U. Crown

Defeat Sherwood in Finals, 29-23; 145-Pound Semifinals Victory to Stewart Bros. Five; Typists Rout Northeast, Enter Finals

The New Washington Post-District A. A. U. girls' basketball champion is the Treasury Department sextet, but the defending champion, Rockville team gets an assist as five members of the former champs led the Government five to a 29-23 victory over Sherwood A. C. last night in Heurich gym.

The United Typewriters, managed by Clinton Price, worked their way into tomrorow night's finals of the unlimited class by downing a fighting Northeast Branch Boys Club five, 49-32. In the 145-pound class, the Stewart Brothers Aces came from behind to wi their semifinal from the lightweight Northeast Branch team, 15-13.

Margaret Lanier, high-scoring forward of the Rockville team for four straight seasons, was in a familiar role with a different team as she totaled 19 points and led her teammates to the victory. The winners receive The Washington Post Trophy and individual members of the team gold medals. Sherwood players receive silver medals.

Miss Culp Doesn't Play

The first final round in the three-class tourney was played before a near-capacity crowd, but, except for a brief first-quarter stand and a fourth-period rally that fell short, the fans expected the Treasury triumph. Marjorie Culp, one of Sherwood's outstanding players, was not in the line-up.

The teams scored alike from the floor, but the new champions held an 11-5 edge from the foul line and that netted the victory margin.

Treasury was ahead, 7-5, at the end of the first period, but at half-time were in the van, 13-8, and at the end of the third period doubled the score on the Northeast girls, 22-11. The Sherwood coach shifted Betty Lewis from forward to guard in the fourth quarter and she dropped four straight baskets but the spurt only reduced the margin to 28-21.

Ruth Hull accounted for all but two of Sherwood's points before Miss Lewis shifted to the forward post, and totaled 13 for the game.

Margaret Lanier scored the seven field goals from all corners of the court and had an unerring eye from the charity stripe in leading her team to the title.

As was expected, the superior

McDowell Knocks Out Dorval in 3d

Right Beside Chin Flattens Build-up Foe; Winner to Meet Furr

By Al Hailey

The final chapter of the build-up-McDowell-for-Furr campaign was run off last night at Turner's Arena, but the only result was a distinctly unpleasant aroma and a chorus of boos.

The gentleman in question, Wild Bill McDowell, of Dallas, Tex., scored a "knockout" over Jackie Dorval, a new arrival from Cincinnati in 1 minute, 7 seconds of the third round of their scheduled eight-round headline attraction.

McDowell is good, he has style in the ring that pleases those who behold him in action and it's a pity he had to win by fanning Dorval to the canvas with a looping right hand that traveled just south of Jackie's widely exposed chin.

648 Fans

While the former Texas cow-milking champion admittedly has something, there is some doubt that just the wind of one of his punches carries knockout power, so the 648 paying customers seemed to think.

Wild Bill came out in the third with a murderous gleam in his eye and began throwing punches at Jackie from all angles. They were sailing by Jackie's head so fast he probably felt as though he was standing in the middle of Rock Creek parkway at the afternoon rush hour.

Three times Bill's looping left hand whacked Jackie on the chin before he twirled around dizzily and began reaching for the canvas. Another right caught him just behind the left ear and he sideslipped into the ropes. A flurry of lefts and rights went by and Jackie went down to stay.

He made one brief stand, one which won him the first round. He rushed out, slammed a right hand to Bill's head that reddened the Texan's left eye. Then he worked on Bill's midsection until Bill backed into the ropes in desperation. McDowell turned the tables the next round, however, and carressed Jackie's tummy with a barrage of powerful hooks.

Bill will fight Furr next Monday night. The results should be interesting.

The third eight-rounder brought out two featherweights in their Washington debut—Matt Perfetti, of New York, and Johnny Marcelline, of Philadelphia—in a battle that

Dodgers Hit Six Homers, Beat Tigers

Flock Collects 16 Blows to Turn Back Bengals, 18-11; Yanks Break Camp

By the Associated Press

Clearwater, Fla., March 25—Aided, as usual, by the short rightfield fence and a brisk wind, the Brooklyn Dodgers poled out 16 hits—six of them home runs—to conquer the Detroit Tigers, 18 to 11, today. Joe Vosmik led the pounding parade with two homers and a single, batting in seven runs. Pewee Reese also hit for the circuit twice.

The Tigers hit three homers, one by Hank Greenberg, but they never were in the argument after scoring three runs in the fourth to tie the count at 8-8. Brooklyn dusted off southpaw Tom seats for eight off southpaw Tom Seats for eight innings.

Yanks Beat Blues

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25.—The veteran Monte Pearson and the rookie Marvin Breuer limited the Kansas City Blues to six hits and the world champion Yankees won their final game of the training season here, 12-2.

The Yank victory was typical. Jake Powell and Arndt Jorgens clouted homers with the bases loaded to complement the pitching. Pearson was especially good, allowing but one run and two hits in the five innings he worked.

Triple Beats Macks

San Francisco, March 25—Capt. Arky Vaughan's ringing eighth-inning triple with two men on base gave Pittsburgh's Pirates today a 5-to-4 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics and their third win in the five games between the two teams.

Vaughan, who has been hitting above a .400 clip, tied the score at 4-all with his wallop. A pinch-runner for him scored the winning tally after a long fly.

The Giants gave Carl Hubbell three runs to work on in the first inning and he responded by pitching 4 1-3 innings of hitless ball. Joe Orengo broke the spell with

Colorado Grid Coach Resigns, Is Paid in Full for Three Years

By the Associated Press

Boulder, Colo., March 25.—Bernard F. (Bunny) Oakes, whose teams won two conference championships and whose star pupil was All-America Byron (Whizzer) White, stepped down today as football coach at Colorado University with a cash settlement in his pocket.

He and President Robert L. Stearns reached an agreement to terminate his contract—it had three years to run—five weeks after 35 players from the team that won the big seven conference title last fall signed a petition urging the board of regents to dismiss him.

The 41-year-old coach contended in a statement that "the cash settlement and my record are a complete vindication of me and my coaching methods."

President Stearns, announcing the severance of relations, said in a four-paragraph statement that Harry Carlson, director of athletics, "has been instructed to make recommendations in the near future for the appointment of a new football coach."

During the months of controversy in the athletics department, Oakes had charged Carlson, Walter B. Franklin, graduate manager of athletics, and Mark Schreiber, assistant to Franklin, did not cooperate with him.

At Oakes' request, the amount of the cash settlement was not disclosed. His present contract, signed in January, 1938, a few weeks after Whizzer White and his fellow Buffaloes lost to Rice in the Dallas Cotton Bowl, reportedly called for $5,000 annually.

"I intend to stay in the coaching profession, but have no immediate plans for the future," the former Marine said.

He was a teammate of Red Grange at Illinois, assistant coach at Nebraska and Tennessee and head coach at Montana University before coming here in 1935.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 25.—Boy, hand me my debunker, that new polysyllable job, because we're going to shoot an age-old baseball theory so full of holes it can be used in the kitchen as a sieve.

POVICH

Listen to this quote by one of the great army of baseball writers in desperate search of a topic: "Barnew McCosky, the Tigers' rookie star of last season, is facing baseball's traditional 'second-year jinx.' But he is good company. Boston's Ted Williams and Jimmy Tabor, and Charley Keller, the Yankees' World Series hero, faced the same hazard."

What do they mean—"Second year jinx?" There ain't no such hex. It's pure invention by baseball writers hard put for a daily text. It's a nice-sounding phrase and an excuse, perhaps, for some speculation as to whether a rookie who has flashed across the baseball firmament in his first season will continue his high success, but as for a second-year jinx existing in fact, the boys are daft.

McCosky hit a neat .311 for the Tigers last season, but can he repeat? Williams built up a lusty figure of .327 for the Red Sox in 1939, but is he a flash in the pan? Can Keller duplicate his .334 for the Yankees? If they fall, it won't be because of any second-year jinx. It will be because they simply will not hit the ball as well. There is no affinity between batting slumps and a guy's second-year in base ball.

We'll get around to proving that presently, but let's give the entire picture. In 1938, Jeff Heath walloped the ball for .343 for Cleveland. In 1939, he hit a mere. 292. "Second-year jinx!" the scriveners howled. Young Jim Bagby pitched 15 victories for the Red Sox two years ago. Last year he won only five and finished in the minors. "Second-year jinx!" was the explanation. Young Johnny Humphries won nine games for Cleveland in '38, only four last year, and was sent to the minors. Sure, they tagged him with the jinx, all of which is most certainly stuff and nonsense. The luck that attended Heath when he was hitting the ball two years ago simply failed him last year. He never did get squared away after his salary argument with the Indians. Young Bagby didn't match his 15 victories of two years ago because he simply isn't a good pitcher. Cleveland's Humphries developed a streak of wildness.

The league's pitchers had 154 games last year in which to discover the batting weaknesses of McCosky, Keller and Williams. If they couldn't stop their hitting streaks while working at it for six months, it is rather evident that the trio are naturally good hitters. As for any theory that the rookie stars were amassing their big averages before the pitchers could find out how to pitch to them, take the case of Keller. During the first month of the season, he didn't bat, .200. Keller was learning more about the pitchers by the end of the year than they were discovering about him.

But to get back to the second-year jinx; where the heck was it when a long list of big-league stars were doing considerably better, or as well, in their second season in the majors as in their first? Listen to some facts:

Earl Averill broke into the big leagues in 1929 by hitting .330. The second-year jinx got him all right. In 1930, he just raised his batting average 9 points to .339. It wasn't until five years later that Averill encountered the jinx that was supposed to visit him in his second season. In 1935, he hit a modest .288.

The second-year jinx would get Beau Bell, they suggested, after Bell had hit a noble .344 for the Browns in 1936. It sure did. In 1937, he hit only .340, but somehow the Browns decided to retain him. George Case batted .305 in his first season with the Nats. The pitchers would learn about him. They did, but not much. His next season, Case hit .302.

What kept the jinx in hiding in 1930 after Bill Dickey had hit .324 in 1929? We don't know where the hex was holed up in Dickey's case, but we do know that in his second year, Dickey boosted his average to .339. Joe DiMaggio extended no recognition to any second-year jinx. In 1936 he hit .323 and in 1937 he upped that figure to .346.

We could go on and on. Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox hit .289 in his maiden season and .318 last year. Charley Gehringer wasn't annoyed by any such hex, either. He broke in in 1925 as a .295 hitter and in 1926 belted .313. Buddy Lewis did a fair job of hitting, 291. in his first season with the Nats and wasn't bothered by any jinx in his second year when he hit .314. Ducky Medwick broke in as a .306 hitter and blossomed the next year as a .319 slugger. The second-year jinx affected Johnny Mize so seriously that in 1937, the year after he broke in, he batted only .364. Ken Keltner did all right, too, in his second season after batting .276 in 1938. He just boosted his average 49 points in '39.

So, my chickadees, the next time you read that some rookie is confronted with a second-year jinx, pay no mind. Because some baseball writer is merely hard up for a topic.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Another mighty atom of sport was born here in this piney paradise the other day, and we happened to be in on the delivery. He is Ben Hogan, winner of the big North-South Open golf tournament. He's a fit companion for such Davids of high endeavor as little Bill Johnston, Mel Ott, Albie Booth, Henry Armstrong and all the other little men who have proven valiantly that it isn't necessarily true that a good big man can always beat a good little one.

CONSIDINE

Hogan weighs 138, soaking wet, and he comes up to about here on you. But with the exception of Jimmy Thomson and Sam Snead, he is the most consistent long hitter in golf today. We followed him down the home stretch of his record-breaking victory in the North-South, and though he was tired and distraught by the strain of outshooting the world's leading golfers, he was slugging the cover off the ball.

If the committee had tried to pick the ideal partners for little Hogan to play with—the better to demonstrate that brute force can often be overcome by a nimble dexterity—they couldn't have chosen more wisely. He was linked with big, burly Clayton Heafner, and with the equally big and strong Johnny Revolta. Yet Hogan outdrove them by many yards, with screaming low line-drives that made you blink, and made you wonder what dark magic he conceals in his boney wrists and narrow hips.

"It's timing, mostly," Gene Sarazen told us, as we trudged along after the little man who was blasting par over the great Pinehurst No. 2 course, that had been lengthened to 7,000 yards for the tournament. "Timing, and a couple of things you may not see. For instance his clubhead comes down parallel with the ground 8 or 10 inches behind the ball, and travels about a foot in that same parallel-with-the-ground position after he hits the ball. Jones could do that, but darn few others. It gives the ball a great flat belt, and keeps it low.

"There's another thing," Gene added, "he's got quick hands. They're hard to explain; but in golf, and every other sport, you either have them or you don't. He can 'break' those boney wrists so fast, just before he hits the ball, that your eye can't follow them. He's got hands that move like Joe Louis'. All that, and a heluva heart for busting the ball when he's under pressure. A little guy has to have a lot of that, to hold his own."

We talked to Hogan in the locker-room after he had collected his $1,000 first prize, gotten his bonus check from the manufacturer whose sticks he uses, and testified (for $500) to the efficacy of a headache powder. He was utterly worn out. "I thought I was going to fall down out there, toward the end," he said, with a chuckle. "It felt like I was hitting a baseball—it was so hard to follow through. Anyway . . . the worst is over."

We asked him what he meant, and he said that this was the first big tournament he had won, after many physical collapses within sight of other big titles. "I feel like I'm breathing a different kind of air, and that I'm going to be tough from now on," he said. "I was beginning to get a complex about it. I was second at Oakland and at Phoenix, and lost in the Texas playoff to Nelson. Winning this one was a relief—even if my puppies are barking."

Like most of the top-flight pros, he came up the hard way. He's 27 and comes from the region of Texas that produced Byron Nelson (with whom he used to caddy), Ralph Guldahl, Jimmy Demaret, Dick Metz and Harry Cooper. He started playing when he was 12, left-handed, then turned righthander because he could borrow only right-handed clubs. By 1934 he was good enough to make him want to try some of the big winter tournaments.

"But I flopped," he says. "It takes three years of that kind of thing to make you good enough to hold your own, and I couldn't afford it. It costs a pro $115 a week to live on that circuit—you know, we're the real amateurs, we pay our way. Anyway, I came back to Fort Worth, and for three years I just gave lessons and saved my dough, and when I had $1,400 I decided to try it again.

"That was 1937. I started out with my wife, but I couldn't get in the money any place and finally we found ourselves in Oakland with 80 bucks and no way of getting home. I went out and played in the tournament, played harder than I've ever played before, or ever will again, I guess. Anyway, I shot a final round of 69, finished second and made $780. We had steak that night, Boy."

District Women Golfers Face Record 55-Day Card in 1940

City Tourney Is Awarded To Kenwood

Team Matches Start April 12 at Argyle; Kenwood, Woodmont Scene of Post Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A 55-day tournament schedule was announced yesterday by the District Women's Golf Association, including the spring team match series and nearby sectional and State championships. The biggest card in the history of the association is in anticipation of a new high in entries for virtually every event.

Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, chairman of the District Tournament Committee, included one new event on the city schedule, the Columbia Broadcasting Trophy, and two new cups, donated by The Washington Post and The Star for "B" class players in addition to the original trophies for the low handicappers.

The sectional schedule includes the Eastern Championship, being played for the first time in this section over the Baltimore Country Club course June 11-13, and the first annual Mrs. R. W. Payne Trophy play, a medal tourney, October 3-5 at Congressional.

Team Schedule

Mrs. J. C. Dale also released the team schedule, with the nine-club first team circuit playing the first round over the Argyle course April 12. Six of the seven second teams begin the same day at Chevy Chase while the five-club third-team league opens April 16 at Washington Golf and Country Club. First teams conclude their schedule May 28 at Kenwood.

The Women's District championship was awarded to Kenwood, June 17-21, while, as previously announced Chevy Chase will play host to the Middle Atlantic October 7-11 and the Maryland State will be played at Hillendale June 25-29.

The local tournaments will open with the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial tournament April 18 at Washington, an invitation event sponsored by the host club. The actual District schedule is officially underway April 24-25 with the Mrs. Frank R. Keefer Cup play at Chevy Chase, a 36-hole tourney.

Fields to Be Restricted

Due to the large fields in last year's tournaments that slowed play and led to other inconveniences the fields will be restricted in many of the tournaments.

The Washington Post donated an additional trophy for the 18-and-over handicapped players, to be played September 24 at Kenwood while the first flighters are competing for the original cup at Woodmont. The Star did likewise, while two cups were put in play last year for the Times-Herald tourney.

The C. B. S. Cup will be exclusively for the 18-and-over handicapped players, June 24 at Washington, while the National Broadcasting Co. event will be for the under-18 handicapped players, October 18 at Army and Navy.

For Better Golfers

The Corby Cup play will be exclusively for the better golfers while only high handicapped players will be eligible for the Elizabeth Harris "duffer" play at Beaver Dam.

The intercity team schedule includes the usual pair of matches with Baltimore at Manor, May 15, and at Rolling Road, in Baltimore, October 2. The Philadelphia match

No. 6—Capital

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington, where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

Capital's Third Hole Toughest on Course; Green Perched on Hill

A long, winding par four, the third hole at Capital is rated the most difficult by Pro Tony Sylvester, who is shown halfway up the steep hill that leads to the green. Dotted lines represent two good shots that take the rolling fairway and reach the green

One of the highest spots in the city, the third hole at Capital Golf Club, affords a view of the winding Potomac River with the hills of Virginia in the background. But if you're out for golf and not for the view, the 425-yard up-and-down test is a bogey threat and undoubtedly the hardest hole of the old Bannockburn course.

After climbing the hill to the second green, little "Pike's Peak," you'd expect a little relief on the next hole. But instead you're face-to-face with a hole nearly as hard as the second and a par four instead of a par five.

Gazing out past the course at the river running snake-like toward Potomac Heights, the outlook from the third tee is a pleasant one. But turning around and glancing toward the green, the chances of reaching there in two shots and getting down in two more is another matter.

Club Pro Tony Sylvester, one of the best club-makers in the business and a popular man with his members, selected the third hole for us, but knowing the course, it took little clairvoyancy to foresee Tony's selection.

Capital is noted for its hill-and-dale tendencies. There is not more than four "easy holes on the course, but the third outranks the others as the toughest to par. The tee is nestled back in the trees and you drive into a valley, with woods on each side. If you're fortunate enough to keep the ball in the straight and narrow, the second shot is all uphill, with the green on top. And we mean on top, for if the ball isn't straight it can easily roll down either right or left bank and leave you with a high approach to the pin.

The hole seldom plays less than a good drive and a long iron, and this time of year it takes a drive and a ponderous brassie shot to get home. The hole is a natural, as no out of bounds, traps, or other penalties or hazards get in the way. That is, excepting the woods.

If you manage to get on the green, you'd better get fairly close to the cup or you face three putts. The green slopes from back to front, and if your shot is on the back and the pin on the front, well, count on three putts.

In a nutshell, in your favor is the lack of hazards, but working against you is the slope of the fairways, that may find you standing almost on your head to play a shot, or watching a second shot land near to the green, die there and roll back into the hollow. That happened to Sylvester, as shown in the picture.

The thirteenth hole, a 160-yard par three with an ovate green guarded by deep rough and a watery ditch is a good second as among Capital's hard par holes. Any of the hilly par fives are troublesome, while the fourteenth requires two exacting shots.

Back on its feet the past two seasons after several rough years as a semi-public layout, Tony and the club officers and committees are well pleased with the club's general outlook for the second straight year.

Nats' Losses Fail to Alarm Owner Griffith

Harris Also Confident Team Will Hit Stride By Opening of Season

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 25.—Clark Griffith is expressing no joy but he is completely unworried over his Washington ball team's six defeats in their nine exhibition games. The Nats' owner today refused to view with alarm his club's lowly standing in the grapefruit league.

"I don't keer how many we lose in the South," said Griffith in the southwest Missouri drawl he has retained from his youth. "They don't mean anything. We've been pitching a lot of junk. When we've had our regulars in there we've won games."

Manager Bucky Harris has the complete approval of Griffith in his exhibition-game experiments with young pitchers. "It's better to let our kids pitch themselves back to the minors while they're down here than when it counts after the season starts," said the Nats' owner.

Weak at Plate

"We're looking as bad at bat as anywhere else. Cecil Travis is the only one of our boys who is hitting. But you know that Buddy Lewis and Gerald Walker and George Case are a-going to hit when the season opens. You can't keep those fellahs from hitting."

Harris shares Griffith's lack of alarm at the failure of the Nats to win in the South. "This is the time to see what you've got," said Harris.

"We could have won at least four of those six games we lost if we wanted to pitch our regulars. But this is training, not the regular season. I wouldn't have swapped those two throws Jimmy Pofahl made yesterday against the Tigers for a nine-run rally in the ninth. He showed me he could throw, which was more important."

Beat Giants

The Nats' three victories in the South were scored over the Giants, the Indians and Kansas City. On the sour side were two defeats by minor league clubs, Kansas City and Milwaukee. The Indians and the Giants each won a game from the Nats and the Tigers won two.

The failure of Gerald Walker even to approach a respectable batting stride is not regarded with particular alarm by the Nats' bosses. Walker, they know, is troubled with a lame back which he is now resting after a futile attempt to bring it around by steady work.

Both Jimmy Wasdell and Buddy Lewis are troubled with muscle injuries. Lewis tore a groin muscle that scarcely permits him to run out a hit, and Wasdell is out of the line-up with a charley horse.

Jimmy Pofahl has not excited anybody yet, however, with his hitting. Harris is convinced that Pofahl's value as a batter lies not in any average he may compile but in the timeliness of his hits. "He'll never be a great hitter," ventured Harris, "but he's not a set-up."

Wednesday the Nats will not have much valid excuse, however, if they lose another game. They will be meeting the Detroit Tigers here and in the box for Washington will be Dutch Leonard and Ken Chase, the prize performers of Harris' staff.

Eagles, Orioles Open Series Here Tonight

LEN BURRAGE

By Jack Munhall.

Having demonstrated clearly during the just completed Eastern Amateur League season that they are masters of the Champion Baltimore Orioles, the Washington Eagles will be out to prove it again tonight when the bitter inter-city rivals meet at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium in the opener of a post-season series for the Mayor Jackson Cup.

Augmented by a contingent of several hundred Baltimore fans who have made reservations for the match, the largest crowd of the season is expected for the first of a three-game series which will be decided on total number of goals. Although the result of the series will have no bearing on the league championship the Eagles welcome it to show beyond a question that they, at least, can consistently beat the champions. During the regular season the Eagles defeated the Orioles eight times, lost five and tied one.

Should Washington win the series there should be no further doubt that it is the superior team, for the second and third matches will be played on Baltimore's home rink, Wednesday and Sunday nights, at 8:30 o'clock.

With the threat of suspension lifted by the close of the league season, players of both teams will be ready for whatever may develop in the latest renewal of a rivalry that innumerable times in the past has been marked by mass fighting.

At least three Eagles—Ross Knipfel, Paul Courteau and Bill Davies—have old scores to even, and should the Orioles display their usual rough and ready tactics, anything may happen. Knipfel, in particular, harbors no friendly feeling toward the Orioles in particular and Baltimore in general. Twice this season he was attacked by irate Oriole fans and ona more recent occasion he was laid unconscious by a blow from the stick of Red Vitarelli, scrappy Baltimore wingman.

Tonight's match is likely to mark the last appearance of several players of both teams who are apparently ready to move up into faster company. When the next Eastern League season rolls around, chances are a quarter of Washington's brightest stars will be missing, for big league scouts are hot on the trail of Len Burrage, clever defenseman; Courteau and Hal Dewey, high-scoring wingmen, and Les Ramsay, pugnacious and persistent center whose poke checking is tops in the league.

Orioles who may be making their last local starts include Norman Calladine, center; Vitarelli, Guy Reach and Carl Ripley, wingmen, and Omer Kelly, goalie. Kelly is reported a cinch to be grabbed up by a big league team on the strength of his seven shutouts this season. Of the others, Burrage is most sought, although he has repeatedly stated his disinterestedness in a professional career. Yesterday brought Burrage's fifth professional offer in the nature of a proposition to coach Glace Bay Miners, of Nova Scotia.

Georgetown Nine Retreats Indoors For Penn Workout

Winter's cold breath blew Georgetown University's baseball team into the welcome warmth of the gymnasium yesterday to further retard the Hoyas' conditioning for their season opener here tomorrow with the University of Pennsylvania.

Coach Joe Judge has announced that he will alternate a trio of right-handers in tomorrow's game, scheduled for 2:30 at the Hilltop medical school field. Capt. Johnny Smith is listed to start and be followed in three-inning turns by Bill Wixted and Vinnie Powers.

Seven pitchers, two southpaws, worked out in the gym yesterday with three catchers, lefties John Dickelman and Joe Mahoney and the orthodox Jim Kiernan and Jim McKay joining the above mentioned trio. Kiernan, a diminutive sophomore with loads of stuff, continued to impress as a potential star.

Idle Pros at Greensboro Name Guldahl Best 'Money Player'

Shop Talk Occupies Players Waiting for Play To Resume; Longest Hitter Question Baffles

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Greensboro, N. C., March 25.—Watching the ice melt at the nineteenth hole and the snow melt off the eighteenth green at the Starmount Forest Country Club:

While waiting for play to be resumed tomorrow or Wednesday in the $5,000 Greensporo Open, some of the pros began discussing "money" players. Not the men who play just for cash, but the ones who play best when the chips are down. After Walter Hagen and Bobby Janes had been mentioned, there wasn't a dissenting voice when Henry Picard nominated Ralph Guldahl as the No. 1 man of the present-day crop . . . Ben Hogan, who tied for first in the opening round here 'way back on Saturday; Ky Laffoon, Sammy Byrd, Tony Penna and Leonard Dodson all nodded in sage agreement.

"Nerve control, that's what he has better than anybody," said Picard. "Just look at his record. A 69 for 281 in the open at Birmingham in '37, when Snead already was in with 283. Another winner at Denver in '38; lost out by a putt in '33; tied for seventh last year and eighth in '34 and '36. No man around today can match that record in the one tournament where the pressure really is tough."

While the continued postponement of play has become a headache to the hard-working tournament promoters, the players haven't minded it so much . . . After five months of being together constantly, it's given them a chance to get away by themselves . . . Gene Sarazen, looking out at the greens and tees that have been swept clear of snow and the fairways that are beginning to dry out, recalled a Hyder Cup match in which he played in Leeds, England. "We played through hail and snow, but those British, they'd never postpone a match," said the squire.

Who's the longest driver in golf? They're still arguing, and getting no nearer a conclusive answer . . . In a contest at San Antonio this winter, Jimmy Thomson beat Sam Snead, 286 yards to 282. At New Orleans it was Snead 286, Thomson 279.

Greensboro Open Again Postponed

Greensboro, N. C., March 25 (AP). The tournament committee and Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, decided today upon another one-day postponement of the second round of the $5,000 Greensboro Open golf tournament.

An all-day snowfall yesterday blanketed the fairways. Although a bright sun beamed this morning, the temperature was 28 degrees and the snow remained.

Weather permitting, play will be resumed with an 18-hole round tomorrow and the final 36 holes Wednesday.

Benny Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Clayton Heafner, of Linville, were tied at the end of Saturday's opening round with 69 each, two under par.

The Asheville Open, scheduled to begin Thursday and last four days, instead will open Friday with the 36-hole finale Sunday.

Ed Dudley Depends on Putter For First Masters' Victory

Host Pro at Augusta Holds Low-Stroke Average for 6 Years

By the United Press

Atlanta, Ga., March 25.—All the former champions will be in the field that tees off for gold and glory in the seventh masters' tournament April 4, but the real master of the Augusta, Ga., classic won't be wearing a crown.

If they paid off in consistency over a period of years, Ed Dudley, the home pro, would draw top money. In the six previous masters' tourneys, Dudley compiled a total score of 1,745 strokes—12 better than Henry Picard and 18 lower than Horton Smith, former champions who likewise have never missed a masters'.

Big Ed's best single performance was third place in 1937. That was the time he set a hot pace until his putting went sour on the last round and Byron Nelson and Ralph Guldahl surged past him to finish one-two.

Depends on Little Putter

Now Big Ed was hoping the seventh time would be a charm.

"It all depends on the little putter," he said, adding that he could "take care of the other clubs without any trouble."

And other pros will tell you that Dudley's long game ranks with the best. His drives don't carry far, but they are hard and true, and his approaches fall dead to the green.

Despite his masters' role of always a contender but never a champion, Dudley takes special pride in the annual trek of the golfing great to Augusta and along with Bobby Jones, who makes his only competitive appearance in the masters' has become unofficial host for the occasion.

Ninety Invited

Dudley spends his summers at the Philadelphia Country Club, but the rest of the year he holds forth at the Augusta national course, which isn't so many miles from the Georgia coastal marches where he was born 38 years ago.

Masters' invitations are restricted to champions of the major Professional, Amateur or Open tournaments, and to golfers who finished high in the 1939 Masters', United States Open, United States Amateur and Professional Golfers' Association events.

ED DUDLEY

A field of nearly 90 has been invited to compete this year over the 72-hole route at the Augusta national course. Two-time winner Smith, Picard, Nelson and the other champions, Guldahl and Gene Sarazen, are included.

Amateurs Promising

However, the younger crop of pros were drawing pretournament support, notably Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., who had burned up the winter circuit to become 1940's leading money-winner, and Clayton Haefner, the comer from North Carolina.

Dudley predicted the amateurs would give the pros a run for their money. Marvin (Bud) Ward, National Amateur champion from Seattle; Charley Yates, of Atlanta, former British amateur titlist, and Art Doering, of Chicago, were reported ready to swing hot clubs for glory alone.

Bobby Jones, who since his layoff in 1930 had not offered much competition in the masters', had hoped to do better this year, but a sore shoulder kept him from rounding into condition.

Equistar Captures Place in Feature by Neck; Favored Sack Is Beaten Out

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 25.—Joseph E. Widener's Town Boy, a gelding that does his best running in the stretch, easily ran over some very fast but faint-hearted three-year-olds here today. Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Equistar, making his initial start of the winter, saved the place by a half length, with Mrs. B. Evans' Raise Up third. Sack, the fifth straight beaten favorite of the day, finished sixth in the field of eight.

Town Boy, ridden by Ken McCombs, was a $16.60 for two shot. He stepped the distance in 1:06-1-5, with so many speed demons in the field.

Today's card ushered in the last two weeks of the thriving Florida racing season. The current meeting is the most successful in the history of the track, which had its inception in 1931.

Hutoka and Equistar fought for the early lead. Hutoka was first to falter. Don Meade then urged Equistar into a length advantage. The son of Equipoise was still in front after turning for home, but he soon displayed the stopping tendencies he showed last season.

Town Boy, last out of the gate, worked his way up steadily and, coming to the outside of the tiring leader in the stretch, breezed past the Stewart colt for an easy triumph. Raise Up always held third position under control. Sack never threatened.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOST GOLD, $9.40, $6.70, $4.20; BETTY'S BROOM, $12.40, $6.40; NEW YEAR, $2.70.

LOST GOLD, going forwardly on the outside until straightened into the stretch, drew out when briskly urged and had speed in reserve at the finish. BETTY'S BROOM displayed speed while saving ground, but could not keep stride with the winner when challenged. NEW YEAR gradually worked his way up and shook off CODORNIZ through the stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:36½. Winner, Le Mar Stock Farm's ch. c. (3), by Misstep—Strong. Trained by M. Shapoff. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOLEST, $30.20, $10.30, $6.50; HIGHOLA, $4.80, $3.30; BULL RING, $5.20.

Daily Double, LOST GOLD and MOLEST, Paid $247.00.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:05½. Off at 3:05½. Winner, J. H. Carr's b. g. (5), by Diavolo—Stonechat. Trained by R. Metcalf. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHISKOLO, $16.60, $9.00, $4.30; PONT NEUF, $8.70, $4.70; HAT CHECK, $3.00.

WHISKOLO moved up steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch, was carried wide on the stretch turn, but finished gamely to get up. PONT NEUF displayed the most speed, but bore out badly entering the stretch and then faltered. HAT CHECK slipped through on the inside and finished gamely. CALLING was compelled to race very wide.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:31½. Off at 3:31½. Winner, W. H. Bradley's b. g. (11), by Lucullite—Decree. Trained by W. H. Bradley. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:53⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEDUCE, $30.30, $10.30, $5.20; LISTOWEL, $4.80, $3.90; DEVIL'S PEAK, $3.70.

DEDUCE took command at the start, was cleverly rated in front and drew out through the stretch under light urging. LISTOWEL, always in closest pursuit of the leader, finished stoutly, but could not reach the winner. DEVIL'S PEAK, vigorously urged all the way, was unable to better his position. EL PUMA was weakly handled.

FIFTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:00. Off at 4:00½. Winner, J. E. Widener's b. g. (3), by Haste—Mademoiselle de Valois. Trained by D. E. Stewart. Value to winner, $750; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:06⅘.

HUTOKA	(Roberts)	111	1	3	1½	2h	4h	8	7.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOWN BOY, $16.80, $7.20, $4.60; EQUISTAR, $4.80, $3.90; RAISE UP, $4.20.

TOWN BOY improved his position steadily in the final 3 furlongs, wore EQUISTAR down through the stretch and won going away. EQUISTAR forced a fast pace and raced HUTOKA into defeat, drew out entering the stretch, but then faltered suddenly in the last 70 yards. RAISE UP, always prominent, closed gamely, but could not get up. DEVIL'S CRAG finished on his own courage.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:27. Winner, A. L. Aste's b. c. (3), by Flying Heels—Malvina. Trained by P. Winn. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45⅘.

DON BOSCOMBE	(Anderson)	116	5	7	6h	6h	7	7	7	28.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING DUKE, $12.40, $6.20, $4.20; JAY BEE DEE, $5.40, $3.30; AIRTIGHT, $3.60.

FLYING DUKE moved up with determination rounding the lower turn, took command and maintained his lead under strong pressure. JAY BEE DEE saved much ground in the last half mile and held AIRTIGHT safe. The latter lost much ground entering the stretch, but disposed of the others. STORMY PASSAGE and GAMESTER had no mishaps.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35½. Winner, W. E. Boeing's br. h. (6), by Whichone—Piceline. Trained by T. Horning. Value to winner, $750; second, $200; third, $75 and $75. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PICCOLO, $4.60, $3.90, $2.60; CERISSE III, $8.80, $4.50; †OFF GUARD, $2.50; †SKETCHBOOK, $4.00.

PICCOLO, away slowly, moved into contention rapidly when placed to pressure and, coming through between horses at the furlong pole, outlasted CERISSE III in the final drive. CERISSE III took command entering the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. OFF GUARD, used up racing BUSY MORN into defeat, just lasted long enough to deadheat SKETCHBOOK for the show. SKETCHBOOK finished with a belated rush.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start fair. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:23½. Off at 5:23½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. m. (5), by Sun Briar—Kincsen. Trained by George Alexandra. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:53⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN KINCSEN, $7.30, $5.10, $3.10; WINGED VICTORY, $4.90, $3.20; SURE SWIFT, $3.70.

SUN KINCSEN, restrained in the first quarter, engaged the leader in a duel rounding for home, then drew out slightly at the finish. WINGED VICTORY assumed command at once, held away for more than a half mile, but could not withstand the winner's final bid. SURE SWIFT trailed most of the journey and closed strongly at the finish. DIABROOM had no excuses.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Perhaps you will remember a column I wrote sometime ago about a mare at Alan Clare's Huntington Farm who disowned her colt from the start. She would not nurse the youngster. He retaliated by biting most of the hair out of his mother's tail. She kicked the colt and he had scars on him as a result. In fact, he had to be fed from a bottle. I saw the same colt yesterday at the farm. He is now 2 years old and ready to go to the races and he's just about the finest-looking juvenile I have seen around this section this year. But the mare has had two offspring since and has proven a good mother to these. The ways of men and horses, too, are strange. I'm trying to make a deal whereby the colors of the Bennings Stable will be flying once more. We didn't do anything with Dunlad last fall. But this is another season and hopes are high in the spring. I hope you liked the winning rhyme in the Heckle Art Brown contest. If you haven't anything else to do, go down to the Capitol Theater this week and see Lovely Brown at the organ. He's going to be there again next week so it looks like he won't be at Bowie for the opening. But he will keep Frank Cronan and myself busier than a pair of Chinese bookkeepers taking those daily doubles and "if" bets out there. Next Monday afternoon he may be playing the organ but his heart won't be in the highlands chasing a deer. His thoughts will be centered on that first race at Bowie. And if you see smoke coming from either side of him, it will be that betting money of his burning holes in his pockets. Confucius say: Absolutely no phooey, my good thing goes Monday at Bowie. BILL.

First race—My One appears the best suited of the juveniles gathered for the first race. Needs only the right handling. I Bid has had many chances and should go well. Pososy for the show end.

Second race—Miss Hildur could be the right one in this field. Dunlad, once in the colors of the Bennings Stable, will be close and could take it all. Poker Dice appears capable of holding the others safe.

Third race—White Topper is fit and ready for a test of this kind. With a best effort this one could take down the No. 1 money. I'm going to string along. Malinda B. and Liberty's Love for the place and show awards.

Fourth race—Usin and Epitaph appear destined to battle it out for the important end of this purse. It's a close fit between them and I prefer them in the order named. Whisper should be the third one.

Fifth race—Bright and Early has too much speed for these. I do believe. With some help from the saddle, this one should take down all the marbles. Radio Gold and Sargaso are in good shape and will be right in the thick of the battle.

Seventh race—Fore Isus belongs with this brand of platers and will be there or thereabouts. I'm going to take my chances. Beauinsco and Manymor seem best of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Headin Home, Baked Bibescot and Black Gift.

Know Your Dogs—

No 13 of a Series

By George Berner

THE SCHNAUZER

Originated and developed in Germany, this fellow is recognized everywhere as one of the most intelligent of dogs. They come in three sizes—the giant, the standard and the miniature—but look exactly alike. Used very extensively as a shepherd, cattle herder and watch dog. This one was bred by Marguerite Jones, of Layhill Kennels, and will be shown at the dog show in Alexandria Saturday, April 27

Astor Clarke Boosts Average With 417 Set

In the midst of another late season spurt in an effort to retain his ranking as the No. 1 duckpin bowler in the country, Astor Clarke boosted his Men's Federal League average last night at Lucky Strike by banging out another 400 set, this time a 417.

Clarke's big game was 156 and his F. B. I. teammates rolled high set of 1,778. Interior Department's game of 626 was high.

Naval Air Station supplied the Navy Department League leaders, Bill Douse with a 159 game and "Kid" Tew a 398 set, while Bureau of Engraving led the teams with a 653 game and 1,753 set.

Herman Staffel, of Storekeepers, rolled a 386 set for honors in the Southern Railway Clerks League at Arcadia, while M. Cochrane, of the Short Lines team, had a 149 game. Storekeepers accounted for team high game and set of 602—1,686.

LUCKY STRIKE

Bill Cox and Tom Kinnihan tied with high game counts of 156 in the Graphic Arts League at Lucky Strike, while the latter had the best set total, 418. Progressive Printing and National Capital Press divided game and set honors with 616 and 1,773, respectively.

Saxons supplied the Procurement League leaders in Kenneth Abernathy, game of 142, and Stanley Green, a 387-set. The team rolled game and set of 584 and 1,642 and scored a shotout over Etruscans.

Marie Anderson led the What's-In-A-Names League scores with a 143-game and 337-set.

Harold Canella's 170-game for Western Eelectric set a new season's record in the Electrical League at Lucky Strike, while Walter Dickhaut, of Hechinger, rolled the biggest set, 377. Hechinger, rolling a head to head match with Wise brothers for the league lead, won two games and possession of first place. The best team game was a 610 by Wise Brothers.

Station Engineers rolled high set of 1,659 in the Kilowatt League but dropped the odd game to the leading Transit team. Accounting had high game of 608. San Andrews rolled high game of 135 while Milton Edwards and Bill Hodgson deadlocked with 364 sets.

Convention Hall

Sanico Meats supplied the Sanico League feature at Convention Hall as Carl Enswiller rolled high game of 159, the team top set of 1,717 and won three from Sanico Hams. Bob Litts had high individual set of 415. Equipment and Fryers tied with team games of 588.

Julius Singer has completed arrangements for a home and home match between the Hebrew All-stars and the Ollie Pacini all-stars, the first April 6 at Northeast Temple and the second April 13 at Convention Hall, both at 8 p. m.

Rickenbacker To Speak at Fete Tonight

Colonial Athletic Stars of Other Years Will Attend; Reinhart To Discuss Football

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, air lines official and former crack Army pilot, will be principal speaker tonight when George Washington alumni gather for a stag party and buffet supper at Wardman Park Hotel.

Also scheduled for tonsil exercising are Bill Reinhart, head football coach; Gene Shields, his newly appointed assistant, and Director of Athletics Max Farrington. Reinhart will discuss spring practice and prospects for next football season while Farrington will deal with the general athletic department.

Among the athletic stars of other years expected to be on hand are Tuffy Leemans, Johnny Baker, Ray Hanken, Lee Carlin, and Harry Deming. University President Cloyd H. Marvin will deliver a short welcoming address. Toastmaster is to be Prof. Charles Collier, of the law school. A program of musical entertainment will follow the speeches.

Alumni interested in obtaining tickets are asked to call National 5200.

Denton Equals World Billiard High Run Mark

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 25.—Tiff Denton, Kansas City, equalled the world's three cushion billiard tournament high run record tonight when he scored 17 points in the 10th inning against Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif.

He tied the record he held jointly with Gus Copulos, of Detroit. Denton established the mark in 1919 and Copulos reached it in 1930.

Bozeman, however, bounced back to defeat Denton, 50 to 44, in 47 innings to tighten his hold on second place in the title tournament behind pace-setter Willie Hoppe, of New York.

After the high run Denton was leading by 19 to 11 but the Californian took charge from there on out to give the Missouri veteran his eighth defeat in 13 games. Bozeman now has won eight and lost four games.

Young Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, slid into third place when he lost to Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo.

Welker Cochran, San Francisco, defending champion, defeated Allen Hall, Chicago, 50 to 41, in 38 innings.

Bonura Would Play For a Minor Team, But Not the Giants

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winter Haven, Fla., March 25.—Zeke Bonura, holdout first baseman of the New York Giants, still waiting for a telephone call from Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, says he is willing to play on any team, major or minor, but "not in the organization of the New York Giants." Bill Terry and Horace Stoneham have given Zeke permission to make a deal for himself but thus far his overtures to Griffith have borne no fruit.

Alpha Phi Alpha Wins at Howard

Led by Martin Pree, the Alpha Phi Alpha quintet last night defeated the Kappa Alpha Psi five on the Howard University court, 44-42.

The Kappas started off with a rush, Mack, Henley and Covington sinking baskets in rapid succession, but a basket and two points from the foul line by Pree, topped off with "Windy" Wallace's toss from sidecourt, gave the Alphas the early lead.

This was overcome by sterling work of "Skinny" Mack, so that the Kappas were leading, 19-16 as the half neared its close, and drew away to close it by a 4-point margin, 24-20.

has been revised since the last time it was played here, with four-ball foursomes in the morning at Columbia and Scotch foursomes in the afternoon at Congressional.

Five clubs will enter teams in first, second and third team competiiion: Manor, Washington, Army and Navy, Columbia and Congressional. Chevy Chase and Kenwood will enter first and second combinations while Argyle and Woodmont will enter just ten players for the first teams.

The team matches will be on the round-robin basis, each meeting once with the hosts drawing a bye.

The schedule was announced at a meeting of the executive committee and club chairmen held at Columbia, home club of Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the association.

McDowell Kayoes His Foe in Third

The short and chunky little Philadelphia, at a great disadvantage in height and weight, punched out a split decision over Perfetti. He danced a la Joey Archibald and shot overhand punches to Matt's head with telling effect. The decision was close, however.

Perhaps it was in keeping with the Easter season, for Turner nad Menendez certainly laid an egg with their newest importation, Jimmy Fantini, of Jersey City.

To the tune of hisses and assorted forms of heckling from the small crowd, he heeled, butted and snuggled on the shoulder of Philadelphia's Tony Sarullo in the first eight-rounder until Tony became too disheartened to more than keep backing out from under Jimmy's anxious attempts to find a resting place for his chin. Fantini did step back often enough, however, to get in a sufficient quantity of left hooks to stir the crowd from their apathy and take a decision. Both boys weighed 139½.

The six-round mess between Walter (Red) Johnson, 151, a newcomer from Jamestown, N. Y., and Baltimore's Vic Finazzo, 152, was a sad thing to behold—at least from Vic's viewpoint.

Again it was Finazzo taking a severe beating and ending up in the late stages stumbling about the ring, his balance and accuracy gone. Johnson, a sort of miniature Mickey Walker, had Vic reeling in the first round from a classy two-handed attack to the head. But Finazzo kept boring in and cut Red's right eye with a stinging left in the late rounds.

FBI Plays Delhud Five In Tournament

Two head-on clashes, let the chips fall where they may, are scheduled for tonight in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, at Heurich's gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

Delaware and Hudson's Coalmen, recent victors over the All-District high school five, tackles Federal Bureau of Investigation, starting at 9 o'clock. An hour earlier, the Stewart Brothers Photos will take the floor to battle Jewish Community Center in the 145-pound division. In both cases, the winner will move into the climax struggles in the tournament finals tomorrow night.

D. and H., runner-up to the United Typewriters last year, has its collective mind set on winning the city title, the A. A. U. medals and The Washington Post Trophy. FBI, long a factor in the best basketball circles hereabouts, is equally determined to gain the booty.

Both teams have good shots, strong defense and clever passers. D. and H. probably will be a slight favorite to survive.

FBI can counter with a good team. Al Waters, Bernie Jones, Pete Noon and the others will have plenty to offer D. and H. in the way of opposition. If this is not a point-for-point battle, then the majority of those who follow local basketball will be mistaken.

The 145-pound game may rival the unlimited struggle for thrills. The Stewart Brothers Photos have moved up the championship ladder with impressive performances but they have not been more prominent than the J. C. C. boys.

height of the United Typewriters served them in good stead against the Northeast Boys. The lanky Mills, at center, supplied five field goals and three fouls to top the scorers of both clubs. Ollie Tipton, continued to prove about the most valuable player in the tournament. In addition to being the center of United's passing game, he found time to drop in five field goals and a foul for 11 points. Stanton, Edelin and the other Typers did their share of the work.

Northeast brought a crowd of rowdy rooters who found dislike with a decision early in the battle and piled the raspberries high for the remainder of the game. The Northeast players, for the most part, turned in hard, "never-say-die" basketball, but they could not cope with the coolness of the Typers.

The 1939 A. A. U. champions rolled up a good lead in the opening stages and thereafter held their opponents safe, although Northeast crept to within 8 points at one time in the second half. At the intermission, the Uniteds were in front, 23-13.

Johnny Poston was the hero of the Aces' triumph. "Mr. Basketball himself," as Poston is called around the tournament, stuck in the winning points for his club which trailed, 7-4, going into the second half. Lowell Keagy was the key to the Aces' floor game and did a job of ball-following seldom seen hereabouts. Bennie Stasulli played a hard game for the Northeast 145-pounders.

Strang Leaves Today to Fight In Nationals

Coach Eddie LaFond To Accompany C. U. Boy to Sacramento

Gerry Strang, Catholic University's lone entrant in the National Collegiate Athletic Association boxing tournament, which opens at Sacramento on April 4, will leave by automobile with Coach Eddie LaFond this afternoon.

LaFond originally intended to take Ralph Lazear, of Columbus, but the latter decided against the trip at the last moment. Eddie and his charge will drive more than 3,000 miles and expect to arrive in Sacramento on Sunday. Strang will work out en route to keep in condition. The handsome Canadian, entered in the 165-pound class, completed his last local workout yesterday and weighed 162.

LaFond doesn't want to have Strang too fine and will attempt to bring him in at 165 even. Strang is seeking C. U.'s third consecutive individual national championship. His teammate, Fred Stant, won the senior middleweight title at Wisconsin last year, but is ineligible to compete in the present tourney because he has had more than three years of varsity competition. In 1937, Dave Bernstein brought the Cardinals the 120-pound championship.

Reds Bury Red Wings

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 25 (U.P.).—The Cicinnati Reds had an easy time with the Rochester Red Wings of the International League today, winning, 10-5, with a 15-hit attack off three pitchers. An eight-run burst in the second inning clinched matters as Johnny Vander Meer and Charlie Barrett turned the minor leaguers back with eight hits.

Red Sox Defeat Bees, Even Series

Bradenton, Fla., March 25.—The Red Sox greeted Lou Fette with a five-run barrage in the first inning today as they evened the intra-city series by drubbing the Bees, 7-4.

The Sockers bunched six of the 14 hits they totaled against four Bees' flingers to drive Fette from the box after the opening frame. Denny Galehouse and Emerson Dickman gave the Bees nine safeties, but kept them scattered until the latter took over in the fifth and gave the National Leaguers half of their runs.

Indians Nose Out Phils, 3-1, in Twelfth

Miami Beach, Fla., March 25.—A two-run outburst off the delivery of Rookie Thomas Pullig in the twelfth inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-1 triumph today over the Phillies.

The two runs broke a 1-1 tie that had existed from the seventh inning. The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Gus Suhr's home run, but the Indians tied it up in the seventh on a double and a single.

Los Angeles Beats Cubs by 6-3 Score

Los Angeles, March 25.—Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League pounded two pitchers for 13 hits and a 6 to 3 victory over the Chicago Cubs today in an exhibition game.

The veteran Charlie Root gave up three runs in the first four innings and Ken Raffensberger as many more in the last five. The Cubs got only four hits off the coast hurlers. It was the Cubs' first loss in their last eight exhibition games.

Lincoln Nat'l Bank Marks Golden Jubilee

Albert S. Gatley and W. McK. Stowell Have Been Original Employes

The officers and staff of the Lincoln National Bank, one of the District's oldest financial institutions, yesterday observed the fiftieths anniversary of the day its doors first swung open for business.

The bank's first transactions were on March 25, 1890, its charter having been accepted March 6 and announced in several Washington newspapers, including The Post.

Two of the bank's original employers, who remember the bank's opening, are with the institution today. They are Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president, and Wallace McK. Stowell, a director.

As a runner for the bank's clearing house business, Mr. Gatley was given a letter of credentials written by John A. Prescott, then president of the bank, to Charles E. White, National Bank of Washington. The letter, still in Gatley's possession, introduced the young runner, "to whom you will please pay all checks, drafts, etc., drawn on your bank and payable to our order." Gatley became vice president in 1922.

Member of the A. B. A.

A member of the American Bankers Association since 1891, the many highlights of the institution's early career are recorded in local newspapers.

In 1893, the officers announced: "In view of the great amount of suffering and distress prevailing in the city, and the severity of the winter, the board voted $100 for relief agencies."

At this time it was announced credit was to be extended "in no larger sum than $5,000 and only on paper most likely to be paid at maturity."

The trust department of the bank was organized in 1927 by George F. Williams, present trust officer, assisted by J. Frank Rice and Mrs. Helena D. Reed. The branch at Seventeenth and H streets had been established three years earlier.

Besides Floyd E. Davis, president, other officers of the bank include James A. Soper, vice president and cashier; H. T. Offterdinger, vice president; Robert E. Lee, D. Hammond Wetzel, Edward H. Story, assistant cashiers; Louis Paladini, controller, and William M. Harris, auditor.

U. S. Credit Unit Paints Gloomy Trade Picture

New York, March 25 (AP).—A somewhat gloomy picture of current business conditions and employment throughout the United States, was drawn today by the National Association of Purchasing Agents' monthly report made public today.

"During the past two months general business volume in this country has been declining constantly," the report said, "but in the face of this downward movement becoming more pronounced in certain sections, there is so far little evidence of actual alarm on the part of the multitude."

In a sectional breakdown, general business conditions in March were reported slower than the previous month in every region of the United States although Canadian business was improved.

The report said:

"There is little evidence that any immediate turn for the better is in prospect."

Business Loans Gain For Fifth Week

By the Associated Press

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks increased for the fifth consecutive week in the seven days which ended March 20. The Federal Reserve Board said that in 101 leading cities, the increase last week amounted to $12,000,000, bringing the total in those areas to $4,379,000,000. This was $574,000,000 above a year ago.

Principal increases were $9,000,000 in New York City and $4,000,000 in the Chicago district, offset slightly by small decreases in some other areas.

N. Y. Reserve Largest Bank In the World

With a Deposit High Of 6.7 Billions It Tops Chase and Nat'l City

Los Angeles, March 25.—With deposits at a new year-end high of $6,760,881,000, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York is the largest bank in the English-speaking world, according to the fourteenth edition of "The Deposit Liabilities of 150 of the Largest American, British, Colonial and Dominion Banks," a brochure annually compiled and just released by California Bank, Los Angeles.

The Chase National Bank, with deposits of $2,803,730,326, is second, followed by the National City Bank of New York, with deposits of $2,331,257,944; the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, with deposits of $2,088,427,346, and the Midland Bank, Ltd., of London, with deposits of $1,965,854,034. The combined total deposits of $63,140,511,202 for all banks in the brochure exceeds, by almost 10 per cent, the former all-time peak of $57,484,604,686 in the 1939 issue, and by 88 per cent the depression low point of $33,523,082,172 in the 1933 issue.

$20,000,000,000 Gain in 10 Years

In the ten-year period since the January 1, 1930, issue, the 150 largest commercial banks throughout the United States and Great Britain have gained over $20,000,000,000 and the average deposits per bank has increased from $282,000,000 to $421,000,000. The January 1, 1930, issue listed 9 banks with deposits over $1,000,000,000 each and 109 with deposits over $100,000,000 each; the current issue shows 15 banks with deposits over $1,000,000,000 each and 139 or 93 per cent, with deposits exceeding $100,000,000 each.

Ninety-eight of the 150 banks, with deposits of $43,851,218,817, are American. They are found in 22 States and the District of Columbia. Twenty-three are in New York, 12 in Pennsylvania, 11 in California, 7 each in Missouri and Ohio, and 6 each in Illinois and Massachusetts. New York City, with 20 banks $21,857,587,091 in deposits, leads the American cities, followed by Philadelphia 5, and Cleveland, Los Angeles and St. Louis with 4 each.

Cold Spring Lifts Wheat Two Cents

Ohio Valley Had 2 Inches of Snow; Kansas Also Has Snow

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 25 (AP).—Spring's cold weather, overspreading most of the grain belt, helped to lift wheat prices about two cents a bushel today to the best level in more than a month.

May wheat reached $1.07, up 1⅞, and July $1.05 ¼ up 2 cents cents, within less than 3 cents of their mid-December peaks, which stand as the highest prices recorded here in more than two years.

Pessimistic crop reports and European war news were among the buying factors. While the forecast predicted slowly rising temperatures in some wheat areas, crop experts expressed belief that weather is retarding plant development. The Ohio Valley had ½ to 2 inches of snow for protection against freezing temperatures and there was snow in the spring wheat and rye zone, but Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Nebraska were without covering.

Wheat closed 1⅛@1⅞ cents higher than Saturday, May $1.06⅜@⅞, July $1.05@1.05⅛; corn ⅛@¾ up May 56⅞@57; July 58; oats ⅝@½ higher; rye 1⅛@1¼ up and lard unchanged to 2 higher.

Weakness in Sterling Features Market In Minor Loss of .15 of a Point; Aviation Active, U. S. Securities Firm

New York, March 25.—Weakness in sterling featured developments in financial markets today. In stocks, bonds and commodities there was no violent change from the conditions which existed prior to the week-end. The stock market, on a modest volume of 594,990 shares, recorded a minor loss of 0.15 point. Government bonds were firm to higher and industrial bonds averaged a little above the even mark.

Wheat was strong, aided by the assumption that the war will be with us for many months, and cotton was not hurt by the overnight announcement that Great Britain hopes to fill more of her requirements in the South American market. Cold weather and pessimistic crop reports helped wheat, along with the war news, and the close was up 1½ to 1⅞ cents a bushel, the best prices in more than a month. Cotton closed mixed, 6 points lower to 2 points higher.

There was fairly heavy selling of cotton by foreign interests and the fact that this did not upset our market more than it did doubtless was a reflection of the previous knowledge that Great Britain would turn to Argentina and Brazil for as much of her cotton needs as possible.

Cotton Move No Surprise

Great Britain has been the largest single customer of the American cotton grower, but it is no surprise that this customer, as well as others in the world market, will look to other sources if our policy of scarcity forces our prices above those existing in the world market.

Under the terms of our present Neutrality Act, we are requiring purchasers of munitions and airplanes to pay cash, and to take delivery at our ports. But this cannot apply to cotton, or to other agricultural products. Consequently, while the Allies may have to turn to the United States for heavy ordnance and bombers, they may be expected to conserve their available supply of dollars in order to meet these expenditures. This means that they will not spend any more dollars than absolutely necessary on our cotton. It would be far better from their standpoint to confine as many purchases as possible to the sterling bloc.

Trading in the stock market today was again featured by the aviations, particularly the transport issues. In the group of special issues, Loft carried everything before it, being the day's most active stock and adding another 1¾ points, which put it at a new high. A sharp rise in Pepsi-Cola in the counter market carried its allied stocks along, both Loft on the big board and Phoenix Securities on the curb. The latter gained a point to a new high and was the curb's most active stock.

Aviation Most Active

The way the aviation issues monopolized the big board was seen in the fact that of the 15 most active issues, eight were aviations. Their volume was considerably more than half of the volume of the entire group of 15 stocks. Pan American led with a gain of about a point. American Airlines jumped more than 2 points and National Aviation was up a half. There were fractional recessions in a number of the air issues, including Curtiss-Wright.

Statistical news centered around the weekly steel report which showed operations at 60.7 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1.7 points or 2.7 per cent and the lowest for a week without a holiday since the middle of August. This was in line with expectations but was discouraging to those who have been watching the business indices for some evidence of a normal spring recuperation. Two weeks ago there was a slight improvement in the steel rate, but it was of short duration.

Most of the leading steel stocks closed with fractional losses. Metals were held within a narrow range and Anaconda was unchanged after its favorable report for 1939. There were a few miscellaneous new highs including Crown Cork & Seal, Jewel Tea, Wright Aero, Universal Pictures preferred, Northern States Power preferred and Consolidated Edison preferred.

U. S. Securities Strong

Persistent strength in United States Treasury securities proved the feature of the listed market today. Gains in the formal trading ran to ½ point, but the closer counter dealings showed improvement of 1/32 to 6/32 point. Only a modest amount of business was done, however, owing to paucity of offerings. Higher grades of corporate issues also were firm, while speculative groups were irregular. Turnover was $5,150,000.

Speculative railroad bonds showed a few bright spots, some of the Erie bonds advancing 1 to 3 points. The tone was good in most cheap carrier issues. Local traction obligations remained in previous ranges. Various convertible industrials reflected good demand, and holding company bonds were good. Communications issues were dull.

Scandinavian bonds were under mild pressure in the foreign department, but Belgian, Italian and other European neutral bonds were steady. Belligerent country securities were idle and mostly soft. Latin-American bonds displayed only minor changes either way.

Market Report Is Britain Will Buy From South America

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—Old and new crop deliveries struck out on divergent price paths in the cotton market today. The former lost 4 to 6 points but the new gained 1 to 2.

The entire list stumbled at the start on reports Great Britain had decided to buy more cotton in South America, which would presumably cut into United States foreign sales.

Continued talk among traders of an export subsidy on the 1940-1941 crop, however, encouraged speculative demand for deferred deliveries. This was backed up by belief among market men that the British policy might stimulate official action on subsidy payments for overseas sales in order to maintain the competitive position of the domestic fiber.

In the morning a large spot house vigorously sold the May contract, reportedly against purchases in New Orleans. Considerable transferring from May to October also occurred but declines were cushioned by demand from houses with mill connections.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures recovered balance today after a mild morning recession and closed unchanged to 1 point higher. While prices stiffened toward the last in line with action of allied staples, most traders waited for European markets to reopen Tuesday for a cue to market action.

Sales totaled 52 contracts: May, 6.74; July, *6.78; September, *6.82; October, *6.80.

Foreign Exchange

New York, March 25 (AP).—The free British pound tumbled 2¾ cents today to the lowest price since England went off the gold standard in 1931.

The drop, latest in a series which has cut about 25 cents from the currency in terms of the dollar in the past month, coincide with the effective date of British Foreign Exchange regulations announced several weeks.

Since England restricted uses to which the free pound may be put, demand has steadily contracted. (The free pound may not be used to pay for such empire-produced goods as tin, rubber and jute.)

While the break in sterling has apparently been the result of an adjustment necessary to get in line with current supply and demand, money dealers said, the market has also been unusually sensitive to buying and selling orders.

The Canadian dollar was dragged down with sterling, losing one-fourth cent at 81 United States cents. The French franc lost .01⅛ of a cent.

Currencies of neutral currencies held steadfast, since the English restrictions have placed many in the same position as the dollar. The belga and guilder each gained .01 of a cent and the Swiss franc was unchanged.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Canada—Official Canadian Control Board rates for United States dollars, buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent. Canadian dollar in New York open market 19 per cent discount, or 81.00 United States cents.

C. L. Fleming, 63, Retired Fairfax Farmer, Dies

Clarence Lake Fleming, 63, retired Fairfax County farmer, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital.

Born in Loudon County, Va., Mr. Fleming moved to near Herndon, Va., as a young man. He was engaged in farming there for 25 years. He moved to Arlington, where he lived at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Barron Nash, two years ago.

Besides Mrs. Nash he leaves his wife, Mrs. Marian Anne Fleming; a son, Blakemore Fleming, of Herndon; three brothers, Thomas F. Fleming, of Washington; Frank and Robert Fleming, of Loudon County; a sister, Mrs. Philip Hutchison, of Washington.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Ballston Central Methodist Church, with the Rev. Carl Maxwell, pastor of Fairfax Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

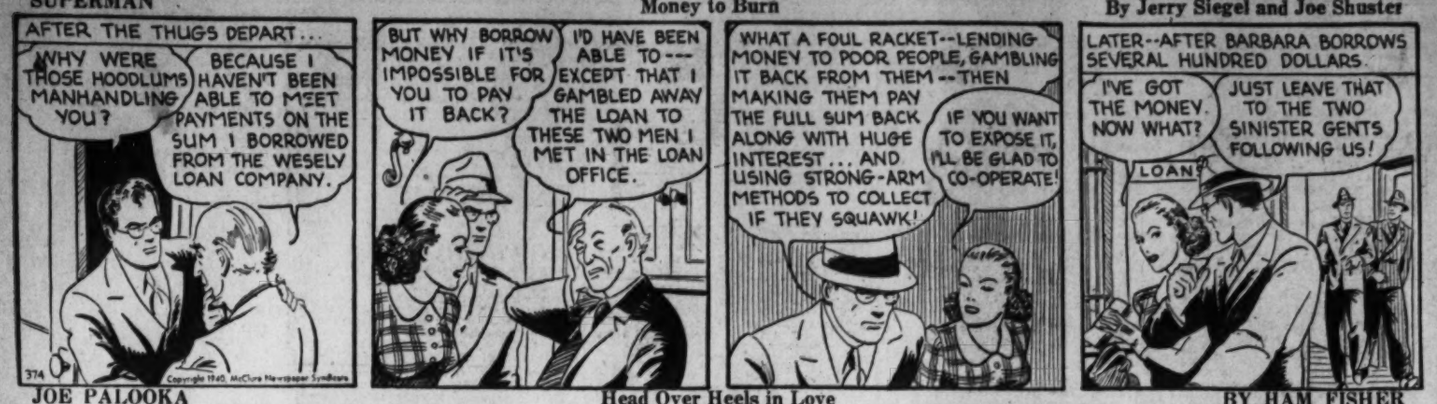
SUPERMAN — Money to Burn — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster



AFTER THE THUGS DEPART...
WHY WERE THOSE HOODLUMS MANHANDLING YOU?
BECAUSE I HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO MEET PAYMENTS ON THE SUM I BORROWED FROM THE WESELY LOAN COMPANY.
BUT WHY BORROW MONEY IF IT'S IMPOSSIBLE FOR YOU TO PAY IT BACK?
I'D HAVE BEEN ABLE TO--- EXCEPT THAT I GAMBLED AWAY THE LOAN TO THESE TWO MEN I MET IN THE LOAN OFFICE.
WHAT A FOUL RACKET--LENDING MONEY TO POOR PEOPLE, GAMBLING IT BACK FROM THEM--THEN MAKING THEM PAY THE FULL SUM BACK ALONG WITH HUGE INTEREST... AND USING STRONG-ARM METHODS TO COLLECT IF THEY SQUAWK!
IF YOU WANT TO EXPOSE IT, I'LL BE GLAD TO CO-OPERATE!
LATER--AFTER BARBARA BORROWS SEVERAL HUNDRED DOLLARS.
I'VE GOT THE MONEY. NOW WHAT?
JUST LEAVE THAT TO THE TWO SINISTER GENTS FOLLOWING US!

♡ A Q 8
♣ A Q
South
♠ J 9 8 7 6
♡ None
◇ K Q 7 5
♣ K J 8 5

The bidding:

The bidding:

An overcall in the opponents suit is a giant informatory double, requiring the same responses, except that, unlike the double, it is forcing to game.

South can bid three spades and wait to show his unusual strength later. He should look forward eagerly to a slam with his cards.

Listen! with Slocum

As a gentleman whose spelling is at best lousy, it was with some joy that I heard a spelling bee on an Asheville, N. C. station over the week-end. One of the Mountain Williams from the nearby Blue Ridge Mountains was snared by an announcer as he walked up Asheville's main drag.

The announcer promised the gentleman 14 tickets to the latest Gene Autry picture, a year's subscription to Snappy Stories and $1.89 if he could spell "ennui."

WJSV is in receipt of an interesting postal card form Mr. Stan A. Keeley, 141 Stoner road, Hall Green, Birmingham 28, England. He reports on hearing the dedicatory broadcast over WJSV from the National Press Club, March 8. According to Mr. Keeley, the reception was execellent and he goes on to prove it by describing every one of the acts.

Arthur Godfrey, horseman, singer, salesman, yachtsman, composer, early riser, scholar and gentleman, now has a new honor. His very fine song "Pale Potomac Moon" has been chosen the official song of the 1940 Cherry Blossom Festival.

Gordon Hittenmark's little radio magazine gets purtier and purtier each issue. It's a handy gadget to have around the house if you feel there might be something you'd like to know about radio folks or programs.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

When Archie Goodwin arrived at Nero Wolfe's office with Zorka whom the mystery solver wanted to question, she was giving a good imitation of having passed out. So Wolfe allowed Fritz and Archie to use the reviving method, a delicate process of placing ice cubes under the arm pit. That worked fine. Zorka it was who phoned Archie she saw Neya Tormis, Wolfe's client, place the murderous col de mort in Archie's overcoat after the killing of Percy Ludlow at Miltan's fencing studio. But the quizzing produced nothing and Wolfe finally ordered her put to bed upstairs. It was Archie's unpleasant duty the next morning to report that Zorka had again disappeared. Then Wolfe demanded a connection with Mr. Hitchcock in London, ordered his henchmen to stand by, and told Archie to call Inspector Cramer. Archie gave Cramer the details of being taken by Donald Barrett to Zorka's hideaway at Belinda Reade's and Cramer asked for a transcription of Wolfe's talk with Zorka.

Chapter 21

AS IT TURNED out, I didn't get much typing done. The talk with Hitchcock in London took place at 9 o'clock as scheduled, and of course I didn't listen in, since Wolfe had said no record. Then I sent Saul up to meet Wolfe in the plant rooms, having first procured the envelope and stowed it away in the safe. The instructions for Saul must have been complicated, for 15 minutes passed before he came back down and calmly requested $50 expense money. I whistled and asked who he was going to bribe and he said the district attorney. Wolfe rang me on the house phone and said to keep Fred in storage for the present and to send Orrie Cather up. Orrie's schedule must have been a simple one, for he returned in no time at all, marched over to me and said:

"With pleasure. I'm busy. How much in cold cash?"

"Nothing, my dear fellow."

"Nothing?"

"Right. And please don't disturb me. I shall be spending the day on research at the public library. Hold yourself in readiness——"

He dodged the notebook I threw, and danced out.

I put a sheet in the typewriter and started, without any enthusiasm, on the report for Cramer, but had only filled a third of a page when it occurred to me that it would be fun to locate Zorka without moving from my desk. I pulled the phone over and dialed a number. The ringing signal was in my ear a long while before there was a voice. It sounded disconsolate.

"Hullohullohullo!"

I MADE mine vigorous but musical. "Hello, Belinda?"

"Yes. Who is this?"

"Guess."

"I'm in no condition to guess."

"It's Archie. Archie, the good-looking bum. I want to warn——"

"How did you get this number? It's private and it's not listed."

"I know, but I can read, can't I? I saw it on your phone when I used it. I want to say three things. First, that thing you're very very beautiful and if you ever want me to come and read aloud to you I will. Second, I forgot to thank you for the drinks. Third, I want to warn you about Zorka. About a thousand cops are looking for her, and if they come and find her there it will get you in a lot of trouble, and I'd be glad to——"

"What are you talking about? How are they going to find her here when you took her away?"

"But she went back there."

"She did not. Where is she?"

"She started for your place about 5 o'clock."

"Well, she didn't get here."

"That's funny. What do you suppose happened to her?"

"I have no idea."

A click in my ear ended it. So much for that. It sounded very much as if Zorka had not returned to Madison avenue. I wrote three more lines of the report and the doorbell rang and I went to the front and opened up.

It was Rudolph Faber.

I admit it was Wolfe's house and I was employed there, and courtesy is courtesy, but he hung up his coat himself. That was the effect that guy had on me. I let him precede me into the office because I didn't want him behind me, and he required no invitation to take a chair. I had explained in the hall that Mr. Wolfe was never available in the morning until 11 o'clock, but I seated myself at my desk and rang up the plant rooms, and in a moment Wolfe answered.

I told him, "Rudolph Faber is here."

"Indeed. What does he want?"

"To see you. He says he'll wait."

"I doubt if I can see him before lunch."

"I told him so."

"Well. Let's see." A pause. "Come up here. Better still, call on Mr. Green. Before leaving, give him a good book to read, and see what happens."

"A really good book?"

"The best you can find."

I HUNG UP and swiveled to face the caller. "Mr. Wolfe needs me upstairs, and he suggested that I should give you a book to amuse yourself with while I'm gone."

I went to the shelves and got down "United Yugoslavia" and returned and handed it to him. "I think you'll find it very interesting, especially——"

He stood up and threw the book on the floor and started for the exit. I trotted around and got between him and the door, faced him, and said urgently, "Pick it up!" I knew at the time that is was childish, but in the first place the impulse to make some kind of alteration on the supercilious look on his face was absolutely irresistible, and in the second place I had been permanently impressed by what I had been reading in the papers about certain things being done by certain people in certain parts of the world. I did give him a second chance by telling him again to pick it up, but he kept right on coming, apparently expecting me to melt into a grease spot. I said calmly, "Look out, here it is," and put it there. I didn't aim for the chin because there wasn't any and I didn't want to pay a hospital bill. Instead, I took his left eye with a right hook and most of me behind it.

The door connecting with the front room opened a crack and Fred Durkin stuck his head in.

"Come on in. What do you think?"

He walked over and stood looking down at Faber. "I'll be darned. How many times did you hit him?"

"Once."

"I'll be darned. And you with a name like Goodwin. Sometimes I'm inclined to think—was your mother ever in Ireland?"

"Go suck an orange. Stand back and give him room."

Faber got up by degrees. First on his hands, then on his hands and knees, and then slow but sure on up. He turned slowly and looked at me, and I looked away on account of the expression in his eyes. It embarrassed me so much it damn near scared me, to see such an expression in the eyes of a man who had merely been knocked down. Naturally, it had been my intention to request him to pick the book up when he got upright again, but I didn't do it. When he got under headway toward the door I stepped aside and let him go, and asked Fred to go to the hall and let him out. I picked up the book and put it away and sat down and rubbed my knuckles and worked my fingers open and shut a few times, and then phoned Wolfe a communique. All he did was grunt.

I WORKED my fingers limber enough so I could resume at the typewriter, but that report was hoeing a hard row. In addition to my deep-seated reluctance to spoiling white paper to furnish a cop with reading matter, there were constant interruptions. A phone call from Miltan, the epee champion. All he wanted was information and I had none to give him. One from a guy in town from St. Louis who wanted to discuss orchids with Wolfe, and an appointment was made for the next day. One from Orrie Cather for Wolfe and, a little later, one from Saul Panzer, both of which I was invited to keep out of.

Towards 11 o'clock there was a phone call from the emperor of Japan. At least it might as well have been. First a woman asked for Mr. Wolfe, and I asked who was it and she said Mr. Barrett and I said put him on and she said hold the wire. I waited a while. Then a man said he wanted Mr. Wolfe, and I said is this Mr. Barrett, and he said authoritatively no, it isn't, put Mr. Wolfe on please, and I asked who it was that wanted to talk to Mr. Wolfe, and he said Mr. Barrett, and I said put him on and he said hold the wire. That kind of a shenanigan. There was more to it than that, but after a terrific and exhausting struggle I finally heard something definite, in a leisurely, cultivated male voice:

"Donald Barrett?"

"No, no, John P. Barrett."

"Oh, Donald's father. Of Barrett & De Russey?"

"That's right. Mr. Wolfe, could you——"

"Hold it. This is Archie Goodwin, Mr. Wolfe's confidential assistant."

"I thought I had Wolfe."

"Nope. I wore 'em out. Mr. Wolfe will be engaged until 11 o'clock. I'll take any message."

"Well." Hesitation. "That will do, I suppose. I would like to have Mr. Wolfe call at my office as soon after 11 as possible."

"No, sir, I'm sorry. He never makes calls."

"But this is important. In fact, urgent. It will be well worth his while——"

"No, sir. There's no use prolonging it. Mr. Wolfe transacts business only at his office. He wouldn't go across the street to receive the keys to the Bank of England."

"That's ridiculous!"

"Yes, sir. I've always said so. But there's no use discussing it, except as an interesting case of cussedness."

For ten seconds I heard nothing. Then, "Where is your office?"

"Five hundred and six West Thirty-fifth street."

"Mr. Wolfe is there throughout the day?"

"And night. Office and home."

"Well . . . I'll see. Thank you."

WOLFE CAME down from the plant rooms a few minutes later, and after he had run through the mail, tested his pen, rung for beer, and glanced at the three pages of the report I had managed to finish, I told him about it. He listened impressively and thanked me with a disinterested nod. Thinking a little prodding was in order, I observed that he was in the case anyway, on account of family obligations, spending money right and left, and that it was therefore shortsighted and unintelligent not to permit Miss Tormic to have a co-client, when the co-client was of the nature of John P. Barrett, obviously anxious to join in the fun and ready to ante. I told him about the 100 bucks of Barrett dough which had already passed through our hands and said what a pity it would be to stop there, but before I could really get worked up about it I was interrupted by the arrival of the client herself. Fritz announced Miss Neya Tormic and escorted her in.

She greeted Wolfe in a hurry and me not at all, and without taking time to sit down, demanded of him: "The paper? Have you got the paper?"

Wolfe said, "Yes it's here. Please sit down, won't you?"

"I . . . the paper!"

"Give it to her, Archie."

I went to the safe and got it. It was still in the envelope addressed to Saul Panzer. I removed it, tossed the envelope in the wastebasket, and handed the paper to her. She unfolded it and inspected it.

Wolfe said, extending his hand, "Let me see it, please."

That didn't appeal to her. She made no move to comply. He frowned at her and repeated his request in a crisper tone, and she handed it over but kept her eyes glued to it. He gave it a glance, folded it up, and asked her:

"Where is Miss Lovchen?"

"I suppose she's at the studio. She said she was going there."

"Surely there'll be no fencing lessons there today."

"I don't know. That's what she said."

"You saw her this morning?"

"Of course. We live together in a little flat on Thirty-eighth street." She put her hand out. "Give me——" Wait a minute. I don't know why I assumed that Miss Lovchen would accompany you here this morning—it was stupid of me to do so, but I did. Anyway, it was she who left this paper here, and I'd rather return it to her. If she——"

"I'll take it to her."

"No, I think not. Here, Archie. Go along with Miss Tormic to Miltan's and deliver this to Miss Lovchen. I like it better that way——"

"That's absurd!" the client protested. "What's the difference whether it's me or Carla?"

"None, perhaps. But this suits me better. It's neater."

He handed the thing to me and the regarded her gloomily. "I hope you know what you're doing. I hope you have some idea of what's going on. I haven't. Mr. Faber has come here twice for the purpose of getting hold of that paper."

"Oh." She compressed her lips. "He has?"

"Yes. The second time was only a little more than an hour ago, and Mr. Goodwin lost his temper and hit him in the eye. So . . . I presume you girls realize that possession of that document——"

D. C. Woman Held in 1935 Slaying Case

Mrs. Smith Waives Extradition, Is Jailed In Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 25.—A Washington Sunday school teacher's wife, who fought extradition today but then changed her mind, was brought to Philadelphia tonight to answer charges that she gave information that led to the torture slaying of an elderly housekeeper here.

Black-clad Mrs. Effie Hattie Smith, 59, operator of a cafeteria near the White House, was placed in a cell on charges of suspicion of homicide and being a fugitive from justice.

Simultaneously with her arrival here, Detective Capt. William C. Engle announced that Santo Ruggerio, 31, one of five others held in a two-city round-up, had made a statement in the Long Island City, N. Y., Jail, connecting Mrs. Smith with the slaying.

Denies Knowledge of Case

Two men and two other women, Joseph Guida, 48, his wife, Helen, 37, John Lagana, 37, and his wife, Angela, 35, previously were seized in Washington and brought to Philadelphia. All were charged with homicide.

Ruggerio, held in Long Island City also on a homicide charge, has agreed to waive extradition, Detective Captain Engle said.

Engle declared he had information that all six were linked with the 1935 slaying in which, he said, Miss Flannery was tortured to make her tell where her employer's savings were hidden.

Operated Tea Room

The detective captain said further that Mrs. Smith was arrested on Guida's statement that she passed along information that the housekeeper's employer, a retired Navy officer, would be a "likely prospect" for robbery.

At the time of the slaying, Mrs. Smith was operating a tea room near fashionable Rittenhouse Square.

Saturday night, when arrested at her home in Washington, at 3530 New Hampshire avenue, by Detective Sgt. Guy Rone, of the Metropolitan Police Department, Mrs. Smith said she would fight extradition. Sunday she agreed to return.

Yesterday morning her lawyer, Homer L. McCormick, told Police Judge John McMahon she would fight extradition and was granted the customary 30-day continuance to prepare her case. Then McCormick announced his client had changed her mind.

Lewis Fights Proposed Cuts In NLRB Fund

CIO Leader Appeals To House Leaders Against Reductions

John L. Lewis, Congress of Industrial Organizations president, yesterday vigorously protested suggested cuts in the appropriations for the National Labor Relations Board and the Wages and Hours Division of the Labor Department.

Funds for the two agencies, Lewis declared in letters to House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and Minority Leader Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, are being "scuttled," adding that the two laws which they enforce are "the two acts of Congress for which organized labor most earnestly demands protection."

Lewis simultaneously sent telegrams to C. I. O. affiliates and regional officers, urging them to protest telegraphically to their Congressmen and Senators "against such underhand attack on labor legislation."

The House Labor Committee will meet again today to consider proposed amendments to the Wagner labor law.

House opponents of the NLRB claimed last night they had overcome resistance to the drastic cuts in the board appropriations.

25,000 Dance In to Inspect New Greyhound Line Terminal

Swing Band at Opening Ceremonies Gives Visitors a Chance to Practice Steps As Well as Go Through $1,000,000 Building

Twenty-five thousand sightseers and a swing band opened Greyhound Lines new $1,000,000 air-conditioned terminal at Eleventh street and New York avenue yesterday.

For six hours—from 4 to 10 p. m.—a steady stream of visitors filed through the big leather and aluminum-trimmed waiting room and past heavy carpeted offices on the second oor. They examined four new streamlined buses outside and gathered inside to rehearse dance steps three deep around the band.

In one of the offices, Swan R. Sundstrom, president of Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, observed similar terminals have recently been opened in Dayton, Columbus, Erie, Pa., and Columbia, S. C., with two to be opened shortly in Windsor, Ont., and Atlanta.

The Washington terminal, Sundstrom explained, embodies all known improvements and refinements in design, including automatic air-conditioning equipment operating in conjunction with the heating plant.

Orville S. Caesar, vice president of the Greyhound Corporation, recalled expansion of the company from operation of a 1914 touring car converted into a ten-passenger bus to a concern operating 2,549 buses over 54,000 miles of routes for a gross income of $56,000,000 in 1939.

The business was started by Carl Eric Wickman with an investment of about $3,000 in conversion of the touring car for transportation of miners between Hibbing and Alice, Minn. Wickman, now president of the corporation, was to have come to Washington for the opening, but was forced to change his schedule at the last minute.

Arthur M. Hill, president of the Atlantic Greyhound Lines, provided more statistical evidence of the 26-year expansion: Last year's operation of 3,600,000,000 passenger miles over the 200,000 miles traveled by buses, consumption of 40,000,000 gallons of gasoline and 1,500,000 quarts of oil.

Harry D. Yates, 69, Former Water Engineer, Dies

Harry D. Yates, former District Water Department engineer for 37 years, died yesterday at his home, 21 V street northeast, after a long illness. He was 69.

A native of Warrenton, Va., Mr. Yates was graduated from Cornell University in 1893. He came here the following year to join the Water Department.

During his career with the department, Mr. Yates patented several plumbing devices and helped install much of the Washington water system. He was a member of the Cornell Club of Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edna M. Yates, and two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Domdera and Miss Martha Yates, of this city.

Funeral rites will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Daly, 86, To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Nora M. Daly, 86, resident of Washington for 59 years, will be at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at Nativity Catholic Church, 6000 Georgia avenue northwest. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mrs. Daly died Sunday at her residence, 1434 Whittier street northwest.

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Daly came here the year before her marriage to Eugene B. Daly, who died many years ago. Mrs. Daly frequently recalled for her friends Civil War events in Baltimore.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Nellie Daly McDonnell and Miss Mary M. Daly; and a son, Bernard A. Daly.

Paris' Envoy Vows Aid for Neutrals

Boston, March 25 (AP).—War against Russia would be declared immediately by the Allies should the Soviet move against another European neutral, the French ambassador to the United States, Count Rene Doynel de Saint-Quentin, said today.

He declared that "if any other country is attacked by Russia, we will not wait. We are ready and we will move against the Soviet at once. We waited for Finland to ask for help. We waited until it was too late."

Rites Tomorrow For Miss Bryan

Funeral services for Miss Elizabeth Bryan, member of an old Washington family, who died Sunday in Clearwater, Fla., will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Miss Bryan was the daughter of the late Joseph Brooke and Mrs. Louisa Stearns Bryan. She was the sister of Dr. Joseph Hammond Bryan, Washington surgeon, who died five years ago. She leaves a sister, Miss Eleanor Bryan.

Miss Bryan had lived until her brother's death at his home, 1644 Connecticut avenue northwest. In recent years she had divided her time between this city and a winter home in Clearwater.

Senate Puts Anti-Lynch Bill On Calendar

Committee Votes, 12-4, Pointing Way To a Filibuster

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday was pointed for what may be an epochal filibuster and political battle when the Judiciary Committee voted, 12 to 4, to put the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill on the calendar.

The measure would penalize State and county peace officers for failing to protect prisoners from mob violence and would authorize compensation for estates of the victims if their death was due to negligence.

Face Cloture Threat

As in years past, Southern Democrats and some of their Northern colleagues are prepared to tie up the chamber indefinitely if the bill comes up for a vote. This time, however, they face the threat of cloture, which would limit debate and force a vote at a specified time.

Republican Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, removed the main obstacle to cloture when he said he would not bind the minority to vote against it as they did in 1938. His stand introduced a political element heretofore lacking. This is a Presidential election year and Republicans and some Northern Democrats are not overlooking the big Negro vote.

Forced 18-Day Deadlock

Said Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, who was generalissimo of the forces which, in 1938, deadlocked the Senate for 18 days to prevent a vote:

"The Mannerheim Line won't even be a starter to the fight we'll put on."

Against the bill—Connally, Miller (Democrat), Arkansas; Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, and Chandler (Democrat), Kentucky.

Funeral Is Today For Lieut. Love

Comdr. William N. Thomas, Navy chaplain, will officiate at the services, while the following Naval dental officers will serve as pallbearers: Lieut. (J. G.) Carl A. Schlack, Lewis H. Daniel, Rush L. Canon, Conrad H. Brandt, Robert L. Eller, and John V. Borden.

Welles Report To Be Briefed By Roosevelt

President Expected To Make Statement On Envoy's Finding

By Felix Belair, Jr.
Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt was understood in diplomatic circles yesterday to be planning a formal statement in the near future covering the results of conversations undertaken by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, with representatives of European powers on his recent tour of the continent.

Mr. Welles is scheduled to return to this country on Thursday and the President is reported as anxious to head off any and all speculation the occasion might provoke to the effect that the Administration is contemplating any "new offensive for peace."

The White House has been at pains recently to discourage acceptance of reports creating the impression that termination of European hostilities was likely at any time in the near future.

In view of this White House attitude and the Allied antipathy toward any peace settlement short of victory, diplomatic circles believe the President's statement, if and when it comes, will hold out little optimism for an early termination of hostilities.

President Roosevelt has been kept currently advised of the highlights of Mr. Welles' conversations.

Mr. Roosevelt has made tentative plans to leave Washington late this week for a brief vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., to hasten his recovery from a cold that has kept him away from his desk for the greater part of the past three weeks.

NLRB Orders N.J. Paper to Rehire Sister of Fahy

By the Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board in a split decision yesterday ordered the Newark Morning Ledger Co., Newark, N. J., to reinstate with back pay Agnes Fahy, an editorial employe found by the board to have been discharged for union activity.

Miss Fahy is a sister of Charles Fahy, Labor Board general counsel. At the time of her discharge, September 22, 1937, she was president of the Newark local of the American Newspaper Guild.

Board Member William M. Leiserson dissented, holding the discharge of Miss Fahy occurred after the leader and guild had entered into a collective bargaining agreement and that her dismissal "grew out of internal differences in the union."

Bob Burns Sued for $70,000; Plaintiff Charges Kidnaping

Comedian and Others Forced Release Of Alienation Claim by Threats, Litigant Alleges in Coast Action

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 25.—Comedian Bob Burns was sued for $70,000 damages today by Daniel W. Hoge, who charged he was kidnaped from his Wilmington home, December 29, 1938, and forced to sign a denial that Burns had alienated the affections of his wife, Millie Bernice Hoge.

Hoge charged that the defendants, who include Jacob H. Karp, ten John Does, two Jane Does and Paramount Pictures, Inc., forced him to go to a downtown office building, after they had ransacked his home and taken a number of documents.

There, he said, under threats of continued imprisonment and violence, he signed a paper releasing Burns from all charges and a similar paper releasing Paramount from responsibility.

A purported copy of the release, which was included in the suit, read in part:

"For good and valuable consideration . . . I do release Bob Burns . . . from all manner of action by reason of my claim that Bob Burns alienated the affections of my wife, Millie Bernice Hoge, which claim has been vehemently denied by Bob Burns and which claim I do hereby declare to have been without foundation and unjustified in fact, and which claim I do hereby withdraw and agree never again to assert."

Hoge charged that when he was released he was told he had better forget the incident under threat of "further injury and imprisonment." He said he had lived in constant fear for 14 months and suffered a nervous disorder.

Burns, who made the "bazooka" famous on the radio and screen, married his secretary, Harriet Foster, in 1936. A daughter was born to them in May, 1937.

The 48-year-old sage from Van Buren, Ark., when he heard about the suit, said it was the "most far-fetched thing I ever heard of."

"I knew Hoge a long time ago back in Chicago," he said. 'I only met his wife once and now I suppose he wants to get some of the money I'm supposed to be earning now.

He bothered me once before about this but it was so fishy I just laughed about it."

Paramount said its attorneys had got in touch with Hoge two years ago just to see what it was all about," but believed the case had been settled.
